Undaunted by their first setback, the Firates samed terth home with the booty of the second world's series battle after a rousing hand-to-hand grapple that was packed with thrills right down to the heat thrust.

Pirate shortstop, walloped a home run into the right field stands in the fourth inning that offset the advantage gained by the Senators on Joe Judge's round-trip smash into the right field grandstand extension.

Even with Bluege in the line-up, however, it is doubtful whether the Senators could have survived the final Pirate drive, in which Cuyler's homer broke the deadlock, and scored Eddie Moore ahead of him with the deciding tallies, while Aldridge, making the last of a series of gallant stands, kept the Senators from boarding the Pirate craft in a desperate ninth-inning rally that before, broke up the sharpshooting of one of Washinston's biggest guns. Stanley Coveleskie and took the second game of the championship conflict in a dime novel finish, with a home run by Kiki Cuyer and the stout-hearted pitching of Vic Aldridge turning the tide victoriously.

The final verdict was gained only by the hairline margin of $ to 2, with the outcome in doubt until the last putcuit, but it was enough to put the Pirates on even terms with the world's champion Senators as the rival forces set sail tonight for the capital prepared to renew the engagement in the third tussle at Griffith stadium to third tussle at Griffith stadium to morrow.

There was a double portion of disaster for the Senators as they withdrew toward their home port, for, besides losing the game and their brilliantly won advantage of yesterday, their ranks suffered a hard blow in the loss, at least temporarily, of Ossie Bluegestar third baseman.

Bluege Recovers.

Bluege Recovers.

Bluege was hit just back of the ear by one of Aldridge's fast inshoots in the sixth inning, and was forced out of the game, while Buddy Myer, an unried recruit, took his place on the field. Bluege dropped as though shot, and it first seemed that he was severely hurt, but he recovered sufficiently to walk from the field to the clubnouse. There, though still in a daze, physicians discovered no appraent danger in his condition. He left shortly after the game with his teammates to board their washington train, but doubt remained as to Whether he would return to the line-up tomorrow, in spite of Manager Bucky Harris' optimism on this subject.

There was no doubt, too, that two separate but distinct breaks helped Pittsburg's eighth-imning spurt. The first was an error by the usually reliable veteran Peckinpaugh, who couldn't handle the moist ball driven at him by Eddie Moore before the runner got to first. The second "break" came a more than two bases on the regular playing field, but it was sufficient to clinch the battle.
