A Gentle Hint

All Paris in these days wants to visit the French firing line, but the required passes are extremely difficult to obtain, and there are, therefore, only a few of the many who finally find their way within hearing of gun-fire. Even these seem an abomination to the French General Staff. Spectators are not wanted, and consequently every means is used to turn them back. The New York Times tells of an amusing incident in which an overzealous group had their patriotism tried cruelly and found wanting. They had collected on a hill overlooking Soissons to watch the artillery duel that was going on across the river where a staff officer rode up and asked what they were doing there. All with one accord they had come out to see whether they could be of any use in Red Cross work. The staff officer at once sent them to the surgeon in command of the nearest field hospital with a message placing the whole party at his disposal. The surgeon rose to the occasion. "It was most kind of you to come," he said; "you can be of the greatest service. Here are picks and spades. Will you kindly bury those dead horses?" Not many of the horses were ever buried, but that corner of the field of battle was successfully cleared of spectators.

A Story of a Five Dollar Bill

One Sunday morning in the prohibition campaign of Oregon, I was taking an offering for the county work in Klamath Falls. When the subscription had worked itself down to fifty cent pieces one of the brightest men at the bar of that city rose and said: "Doctor, here is a five-dollar bill. That is just one-sixth of what I used to spend over these bars every month for the stuff that ruined me, drove my practice from me, closed my law office, separated my wife and children from me and left me a loafing vagabond, wandering these streets and begging my neighbors, as I would meet you, one by one, on the streets, to lend me another nickel to get that one more drink; but two years ago you folks voted the saloons of this county closed. That gave me my first chance. I might have found liquor if I had hunted it. But for the first time in my life I was living where the saloons were not hunting me. For these two years I have not touched a drop of liquor. I am a sober man, and once more I have a happy family with me and money I can give away; and if you voters will only keep the saloons of Klamath County closed another two years, when Dr. Wilson comes back to take another collection I will be able to multiply this one five times."

The Hay Situation

The Montreal Trade Bulletin says that it is understood that the Government are not getting much baled hay at their $17.00 per ton offer; not more than 1,000 tons, it is said, being tendered at that figure. It is thought, however, that $18.00 per ton would secure all the hay required consisting of 60 per cent. timothy and 40 per cent. of tame grasses, which is the class of hay the Government are wanting or, in other words, good No. 3 hay. There is a fair enquiry for the best quality of hay for local purposes, sales of car lots of No. 1 being reported all the way from $19.50 to $20.50. In fact, one car of No. 1 sold at $19.00, 2 cars at $19.50 and 2 cars at $20.00 all on track. A lot of 2 cars of good No. 2 was placed at $19.00 on the track so that prices are irregular. Farmers have done well with their 1914 hay crop this season which has realized $3.00 to $4.00 per ton more than the crop of 1913. A farmer who visited the city from the North Shore a few days since, stated that he realized more money for his hay and oat crop of last year than during the past ten years.

I saw I could na stand it," she told the Laird, when he duly turned up next day to get her version of the affair. "Dinna blame Tammie. The critter canna help it. Better shed him auld Tibbie Broon."
"Humph! She's too old. Marget, for a wife; and I'm thinking I'll never get a week's peace till he's safely married. What about Widow Green?"
"She'll no' gang."
"But Widow Green wasn't averse to changing her name yet again, and ere the day was done she was settled in Tammie's beautifully-cleaned house, having agreed—unknown to the Laird—to give him a fortnight's trial "for her meat." And by dint of drawing on her own stores she kept house that fortnight on about half of what Marget had needed; but Tammie was no fool, and saw through her little game; therefore, at the end of the fortnight he informed her that she wouldn't suit.

acknowledged. "I've my kist packed a ready, an' I'll juist come in wi' ye."

And, with both anxious to please, the month went by in the smoothest possible way, and when it was at an end Tammie brought a dirty pound-note from his worn pocket-book and laid it on the table beside Marget saying:
"It's a terrible lot o' money, Marget, but it's been well earned."

"Thank ye kindly," said she, not lifting the note, however, so that it still lay under his eye in tempting fashion. "But ye can afford it, Tammie?"
"I—I suppose so. But it's a terrible lot o' money, a' the same. The Laird was richt, I think, when he said a wife was good cheaper."

"What wad ye say, Marget, to lat's try an' see? We might dae waur!"
"We might!" drily.
"It's no' altogether the siller, Marget! I'm feart o' loosing ye again. We used to be fell fond o' ither, lassie! Ye—ye mind you time I kissed ye? Wad ye be terrible angry if I tried again?"
And her silence emboldened him to make the attempt, with no untoward result.

"Will ye juist gang afore the Shirra the morn, Marget?" he presently asked. "It wad save a fuss an' needless expense. Or maun ye hae a marriage o't?" anxiously.
"Juist as ye think best Tammie," said Marget cooly.
So next day she accompanied him. Before the week was out Marget had quietly directed the buying of household plenishings galore; a new horse and cart and harness, and altogether contrived to "make the siller tye!"

But not yet has Tammie re-visited the Sheriff, seeking freedom. Instead, Marget's first whisper, "Awee, I'll juist awa' back to ma ain wee hoose," immediately opens his purse-string, but a tender—
"Tammie, ma ain man!" is the magic key to his heart.

For Tammie—poor hen-pecked Tammie—equally to Knowhead's surprise and delight, is simply head over ears in love with his firm, determined wife, who in her turn adores as well as wisely rules him!

PATRIOTISM and PRODUCTION

"I would urge the farmers of Canada to do their share in preventing the people of Great Britain from suffering want or privation."
HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

The Empire Needs Many Foods

In the past Great Britain has imported immense quantities of these staple foods from Russia, France, Belgium, Germany and Austria-Hungary as shown by the following:—

Average Imports Years 1910-1913		Millions of bushels rather than millions of acres should be Canada's aim.		By "possible" is meant the actual results which have been obtained by our Experimental Farms and by many farmers. These "possibles" have been obtained under intensive cultivation methods and conditions not altogether possible on the average farm, yet they suggest the great possibilities of increased production. By greater care in the selection of seed, more thorough cultivation, fertilization, better drainage, the average could be raised by at least one-third. That in itself would add at least $160,000,000 to the annual income of Canada from the farm. It would be a great service to the Empire, and this is the year in which to do it.

Increase Your Live Stock

Breeding stock are to-day Canada's most valuable asset. The one outstanding feature of the world's farming is that there will soon be a great shortage of meat supplies. Save your breeding stock. Plan to increase your live stock. Europe and the United States, as well as Canada, will pay higher prices for beef, mutton, and bacon in the very near future. Do not sacrifice now. Remember that live stock is the only basis for prosperous agriculture. You are farming, not speculating.
