

May that Saviour, whose follower she professes to be, continue to bless Ruth, and make her an instrument of leading many poor heathens from darkness to light.

THE CANADIAN SCHOOL.

We have great pleasure in stating that the proposal and appeal, published in last Juvenile, has met with a cordial response. Already a large number of our young friends have entered heartily into the plan of opening a day school among the Hindoos, close to the Orphanage, and under the superintendence of our excellent friend Miss Hebron. They seem, in fact, to prefer an effort among the Hindoo population to the proposal originally made, to labour for the Mohammedans. What is also very encouraging, and at the same time necessary, a prospect is held out that the contributions will be largely increased. May a rich blessing follow this effort, both to the poor Hindoos, and also to those who thus work for their salvation.

BOMBAY ORPHANAGE.

In a recent letter Miss Young writes as follows:

"The girls who are living in the Orphanage are getting on very well. "Mary Esprunse," of whom I used to tell you as being such a wild careless girl, is now behaving much better."

This is pleasing intelligence, and will no doubt gratify Mary's kind supporters in St. Andrew's Church Sabbath School at Hamilton.

THE INDIAN MUTINY.

At length, and after many anxious months of suspense, the fearful mutiny is nearly at an end. One by one, our brave soldiers have taken every stronghold from the Sepoys, have scattered their armies, and where insurgents still hold out it is in such small bodies that they no longer have power to injure or destroy. The East India Company, which has been so much to blame for mismanagement, and for sinfully encouraging idolatry, has also ceased to exist, and India is now governed by our Queen, aided by a Council of able and experienced men. Let us hope that the day so long looked for, may dawn, when, from Cape Comorin to the Himalayas, every idol shall be utterly abolished, the worship instituted by the false prophets shall cease, and Jesus Christ shall be openly acknowledged and worshipped by every race and condition of men.
