

October 31st, 1930.

Dr. G. R. Lomer,
Redpath Library.

Dear Dr. Lomer,

Here is an application, and I am sure you will receive a number. This was given to me by Mr. Marven, the economist of the Royal Bank, on behalf of the librarian of that institution. She has a B.A. degree, says she has completed all the work now given for the Bachelor of Library Science, and wants her degree.

What are we going to do about such applications?

Ever yours faithfully,

Principal.
