INEBRIATED YOUTH

Went To Sleep in Corridor At Famous English Journalist Castle Carter.

As a matter of routine drunks in this city usually go to jail provided they display their talents in public, but to seek refuge in the county jail corridors, and go to sleep until placed under arrest was the experience of a local ing he was fined $10, with the option of a 10-day term in the institution where he was taken into custody. Another auto ride was in order, and back to the jail where he sought to sleep. However, the prisoner had deposited some money with Governor James Carter when last a guest at his institution, and this paid the fine. In explanation of his prank in attempting to break into the jail the follower of Bacchus stated today that he was in search of the governor to get his money when the spirits overpowered him, and he fell in action and full marching ne fell in action and full marching order. He was thankful today that he not obtain the cash, otherwise the would not have been paid, as he doubt would have been arrested in his inebriated condition on the streets. He denies that he carried coals to Newcastle, and declares that if he were to be arrested it might just as well have been in a jail as in any other building or on the King's highway.

County Officials Produce Report of Inspector Regarding Jail.

Officials at the county jail here take exception to the statement made recently by City Solicitor T. G. Meredith to the effect that the above institution to the effect that the above institution "is a disgrace." The statement was made during a hearing before a special board of arbitration which met last week to allocate the amounts to be paid by the City of London and Middlesex County toward the upkeep of the Jall.

County Clerk John Stuart exhibits the reports of J. Morgan Shaw, the inspector of prisons, following his last visit here, as a rebuttal to Mr. Meredith. It says: "I found the corridors and cells clean and well ventilated. The water supply and drainage is good. The prisoners are properly kept and clothprisoners are properly kept and clothing regularly washed. The prisoners obtain baths once a week, and the food is wholesome. No complaints were received after inquiry, and the discipline and management is good. Owing to repairs to the heating plant a portion of the jail was untidy; but this was unavoidable, and when completed will mean a great improvement."
