Making Merry

At Mealtime, Means Good Appetite, Good Digestion, Good Cheer and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Do You Use Them? If Not, Why?

To sit back after a good meal and know there is not going to be sour risings, gas, drowsiness and discomfort is the logical result of using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets immediately after eating. Most people believe they can trace each attack of indigestion to the something they ate and can still "taste." And it surprises them, invariably, to note how quickly relief comes after using one or two of these tablets. Whether it is highly seasoned food, rich pastry, the heavy hearty foods or some one particular offender the relief comes just the same. Those who are susceptible to attacks of indigestion or dyspepsia should try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets as they supply the stomach with an alkaline effect just as it does naturally when it is working in a perfectly healthy condition. A glance around the table will likely settle down to good behavior.

PRISON FARM FOR WHOLE PROVINCE

County Councillors and Judge Wallace Urge N. S. Government to Establish Such an Institution.

(Halifax Echo.)

A committee representing the municipal council of the county of Halifax waited upon the provincial government yesterday morning and strongly urged the advisability of establishing a prison farm for the whole province, so that many offenders now in county jails for minor offences would have some employment and a chance to reform. Warden Madill headed the delegation, and he was accompanied by Deputy Warden Flemming, ex-Warden Smith, and Councillors Brenton, Bowes and Hayes. At the request of the councillors, the judge of the county court joined the delegation and spoke in support of the movement. Judge Wallace said that the evils of the present system were not confined to Halifax, but existed in certain other counties in Nova Scotia. The county jail system was the least effective, and, in the long run, the most expensive method of dealing with offenders, and he hoped that the provincial government would co-operate with the municipal councils of the province and the city councils so as to get rid of the stupid anomaly of sending persons to a jail to prevent crime, and yet by treatment of them in jail making permanent criminals of many of them. The boy who was sent to the county jail was brought in close contact with vicious criminals and thus was apt to graduate a real criminal from this finishing school of crime.

The judge recognized that the government had many other difficult problems to deal with, and great demands upon their finances, but he believed that if a prison farm were established it could be so managed as to be, in part, self-supporting. He knew that he was expressing the views of the municipal council of Halifax county when he stated that that municipality would be willing to bear a fair share of the financial burden. He referred to the excellent reform accomplished in Ontario since the adoption of the prison farm system, and characterized the county jail system of enforced idleness, as the "one black spot" in the administration of justice in Nova Scotia.

Hon. Attorney-General Daniels said that it was much easier to operate a prison farm system in Ontario than in Nova Scotia. The prison farm was near the city of Toronto, and a large number of offenders from the city of Toronto could be sent there at very little cost of transportation. While he admitted that some reform seemed to be necessary to meet conditions in Halifax and in some other counties with towns having a large industrial population, there was no need of such an institution as a prison farm so far as some other counties were concerned.
