He is unlike an earthly householder, for He offers inducements so entic-ing that man—without injustice to himself—can not reject His call.
His appealing voice must strike at the roots of every heart; His kind to set to work for His cause; and His outstretched hand must beckon with infallible certainty to the pilgrim of earth. Really the labor that He requires of man is not a labor of toil—it is a labor of purelove, where toil has no recognizable appearance. He is not as an exacting master, who requires every unit of labor to be performed for the recompense promised; nor does He watch with searching suspicious eye over the laborers in His vineyard—it is rather with a longing desire and an affectionate regard.

This thought is brought out beautifully and clearly in the Gospel of this Sunday. God, the Householder, is shown as inviting all cleases of men into His vineyard-men who have neglected the yesterday, and men who would be ready to neglect the today. Once His classes of men into His vineyard-men who have neglected the yester-day, and men who would be ready to neglect the today. Once He finds that, under the impulse of His inspirations, they are willing to enter into His vineyard, He hands out to all alike a pleasing invita-tion. He could have ollowed them enter into His vineyard, He hands out to all alike a pleasing invita-tion. He could have allowed them to stand all the day idle, as they were free beings, but His solicitude is that of a father of infinite kind-ness and boundless love. He can not gaze indifferently over the creature of His own hands, not feel uninterested into his welfare. His desire is that heaven—the real home of His bliss—be shared by this noblest of the creatures of His hand. There is no selfishness on His part, but a generosity that knows no limit. worshipers before the idols of un-righteousness. Will the day ever come when all the Master calling them to labor in His vineyard? For them the time will grow fainter. There has been a time when it was clear and reson-ant, but they were deaf to its call. Maker—He of all wisdom and good-ness—will trifle with them longer? What an insult to His majesty, to His divine omnipotence, to His kind heart, to His abounding love! Why

But a generosity that knows ho limit. Sinful man would stand all the day idle were it not for the entice-ments and the voice full of love of the Master who made him. It would seem, now, since God had endowed man with a soul possessed of such noble faculties and heart. endowed man with a soul possessed of such noble faculties and had allowed him to acquire a knowledge of the things of God in the future life, that he would not ...eed much further help from his Creator. But as in the beginning man fell from as in the beginning main right from different; and the same God of mercy who could have annihilated primal man and woman, but spared them and allowed them to prepare for a reward in the future, now within the reach of all, and is yet continues to have mercy upon man sinning in similar ways and greater even of practical Catholics—daily sinning in similar ways and greater degrees. The sin of man at present is much worse than that of man before God had fulfilled His prophe-cies and promises by giving His Divine Son. The path has been laid out plainly, the presence of the masure in which he possibility of eternal disaster with-out God's sustaining hand has been pointed out to all. Graces are more abundant. In fact, the infinite merits of the cross can come to man if he but prepares for them, bring-ing to him the strength and fortiing to him the strength and forti-tude necessary to following the path of virtue—the path that leads to glory.

However, even with all these

Among the practices of piety that compare God's love for us with the love of a father for his children. It is far too superior to it, and can be called by only one name—love of God for His children. Man shows his baseness and his ingratitude by frequently rejecting the offers of his kind Father, and shutting his beaut to the recention of His agentiation of the same little group, who happily have contracted the habit as a devoted female sex. "Alms do not impoverish, nor

"Alms do not impoverish, nor does the Mass delay," says an old French proverb, and a true one. The busiest of men, even in the busiest of lands, takes time to eat; he understands that his head rould heart to the reception of His sancti-fied benefits. The independence of man has in many cases reached a stage where it is absolute defiance, and the sovereignty of the Creator has been deserated, if viewed from fail him in the administration of his a human standpoint.
