FAMILIAR PHRASES.

Many Used in Our Daily Conversation Have Unknown Sources for the Most of Us.

How few of the phrases that we introduce into our daily conversation have we ever traced to their source!

As good as a play? Which among us have realized that its parent was none other than Charles 11., who used it whilst attending the House of Lords during the passing of the Divorce bill? "Lend me from my friends!" Again, how rarely it is remembered that this was the witty request of Marshal Villars to Louis XIV., or that "Eureka" was the exclamation of Archimedes when he had solved an anxious problem. It was Tullyrand who said "Surtout, point de zèle," and Chateaubriand's were those, "I have wept and believed," so often misquoted. The words, "Let the cobler stick to his last," have been attributed to many a wrong man, instead of to the right person, the painter Apelles, who really uttered them, and also those "No day without its line."

Brougham's "The pursuit of knowledge under difficulties" and "The Schoolmaster is abroad" are familiar indeed, but not always credited to him. About Wellington's "The Government of the Queen must be carried out" there is rarely a mistake. "Rich beyond the dreams of avarice" was bequeathed to us by Dr. Johnson, who tacked the phrase on to Messrs. Barclay and Perkins at the sale of their brewery. Lamb claims the oft-quoted "Brilliant flashes of silence," and Warburton, "Orthodoxy is another man's doxy."

The French phrase-makers are masters of their art. L'homme absurde est celui qui ne change jamais, an aphorism of Barthelemy, will be quoted for centuries to come; so, too, "God favors the heaviest battalions" which, first vaguely introduced by Tacitus, was put into crystallized form by Voltaire. "I was Voltaire all my life," exclaimed St. Pieux n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer! To the fervent Saint-Simon we owe the assertion "The Golden Age is before, and not behind us." "Let him who loves me follow me" was spoken by Napoleon, and that other brilliant soldier, Comte de Larochelle-Jaquin, addressed to his men the well-known words, "If I advance, follow me; if I withdraw, I advance, follow me."

The French Revolution brought forth many memorable phrases. "Do you think revolutions are made with rosewater?" was asked by Chamfort. An unforgettable felicity of Napoleon's is that "There is only one step from the sublime to the ridiculous." "Another such victory and we are undone," sometimes attributed to Napoleon, was in reality said by Pyrrhus of Epirus. That a person is "indebted to his memory for his jests and his imagination for his facts," is due to Sheridan, who of happy phrases has left his country a peculiarly rich legacy.

Ivan the Terrible.

Ivan IV. of Russia, called Ivan the Terrible, was not a pleasant person. Even at his meals he was rather testy. On one occasion he threw over Prince Gorskoff, who had failed to be witty, a tureen of scalding soup, and as the prince endeavored to escape the czar plunged a knife into his side. The unhappy noble fell dead, and Ivan, remarking that he had carried the joke far enough, bade his physician attend to him. "It is only God and your majesty," replied the medical man, "that can restore the prince to life. He is quite gone!" The czar, somewhat disconcerted, took a pleasant way of forgetting it. It chanced that a favorite noble came at this moment, whereupon His Majesty took hold of the corpse by the ear, and, using his knife, he cut the ear off and flung it into the face of his old friend. The noble received the ear with many acknowledgments of his master's discomposure.

Ivan was still in the teens when he had one of his attendants worried to death by dogs on the public highway; and in one of his so-called frolicsome moods he would let slip wild words among the terrified citizens in the streets and would calmly say his prayers while gazing at the slaughter, making compensation, says a historian, "for any irregularity in the matter of flinging a few coins to the wounded after he rose from his knees." It is even said that Ivan went so far in his insane freaks as to compel parents to play their children, and children to slay one another; and where there was a survivor "the amiable monarch," if he was not too weary, would slay him himself, and would laugh at this conclusion to so excellent a joke.

Tennyson's Birthplace.

Few places in England are more freely visited than Somersby, the birthplace of the late poet-laureate, and scarcely any so little cared for. It is true, an admirer has placed a memorial brass within the church, but since ill-luck came on the square's family neglect has been very busy. The rectory itself is in the hands of prosperous, frugal farm people, who have let the lawn where Arthur Hallam read "the Tuscan poets" and the girls sang "a ballad to the brightening moon," go largely into wilderness, while some of its is turned into a cabbage garden. The dining-hall, built by the poet's father in its tolerable preservation, and would make an ideal home for a Tennyson museum. The walls, like those of many other houses in the neighborhood, are built of a kind of mud, and already show symptoms of decay. Could the nation not acquire the place before it is too late? No very great cost would be involved, and even that could be met by making a slight charge for admission. — The King.

An Irish Paradox.

"Paralysis?" said an Irishman. "It's the disease that makes ye so that every time ye move ye can't stir." — Sydney Town and Country Journal.

A CRY OF RELIEF

"I Think I Could Not Live Without Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," says Mrs. Thos. Board.

"I think I could not live without Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets." These are strong words. But people who have suffered the tortures of Dyspepsia and found relief are not mild in their statements. They alone fully realize what they have suffered. They alone know how great the relief is. For having once laid off the burden of weariness, the aches, the pains that are the portion of every sufferer from Dyspepsia, they feel that to take them out again would practically mean to quit living.

Thus when Mrs. Thomas Board, of Glen Williams, exclaims, "I think I could not live without Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," you can read thankfulness in every word of her statement. It is a message, too, a message to other sufferers from Dyspepsia that their cause is not hopeless. That if they will but try Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets they will once more find pleasure in life; they will feel as if they had dropped a heavy load; they will feel light and cheery and happy and they will join thousands of others in singing in praises of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

THE EXCEPTION.

I hold a certain girl in mind, Not far above the mediocre. Yet, strange to say, I'm half inclined To joke her.

In looks, 'tis true, a likelier maid Perchance has crossed this bard's horizon; More beautiful girls he's often laid His eyes on.

Ibsen and Richard Strauss she knows, But really she's no rare bird's nest. Ragtime appeals, and I suppose, Dick Davis.

One day each week she cuts pink tea. Departs this life of sweets and orchids And leads a club of twenty-three Or four kids.

While other girls their charms possess She has an extra one that strikes me Which others lack; I must confess She likes me!

That's why I hold this girl in mind, In most things merely mediocre; That's why I'm more than half inclined To joke her.

—Harper's.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Too Risky.

"For thirty years a man in New Jersey never went out of his home except at night," remarked Mr. Milchep, looking up from his paper.

"I noticed that article," retorted Mrs. Milchep icily. "I suppose you think it a laudable example to follow, but let me call your attention to the fact, Jeremiah, that he is now dead. I prefer that you shall run no such risks."

And Jeremiah answered softly, "Yes, am." — Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A Woman of the Day.

For some years Ranavalona, the former Queen of Madagascar, has been in captivity in the City of Algiers. The French Government decided a short time ago to give her a brief outing on the edge of the Sahara, where the air is very pure and many invalids resort. The former Queen and her attendants, therefore, were sent on the railroad to Biskra, on the edge of the desert in the south of the inhabited part of Algeria. Six years ago General Gallieni was appointed by France Governor-General of Madagascar, which his army had conquered. He no sooner received the appointment than he issued a proclamation warning the Hovas against further revolt against the power of France, and made this allusion to their Queen, whom he had banished from the country:—"You had a Queen whose name was invoked by the leaders of the rebellion France has suppressed. I ordered her to descend from her throne and take the path of exile to show that no danger need be apprehended of her participating in any schemes against the colonial Government. She was therefore removed to Algeria, where her husband, the former Prime Minister of Madagascar, had died in exile. She is likely to spend the rest of her life a prisoner in this land, thousands of miles from her native home."

"Born a Man and Died a Grocer."

A meeting of the Toronto Ministerial Association held recently was one of the most spirited of the organization.

The subject under discussion was "The Religious Element in National Education," led by Rev. Dr. G. M. Milligan. Dr. Milligan said he believed that the axiom "Government for the people, by the people," was good, with certain qualifications, but he did not think that government was of the people, for government was of God. The French Revolution taught the lesson of fraternity and equality. Dr. Milligan said that liberty was the duty of a nation was more than the protection of man and his rights, but it was rather to try and give each individual of the nation the best development possible. Quality, he believed, meant that not only was Jack as good as his master, but carried with it the right of every man to be himself. It lies in the duty of the citizen to duty whether he was a man or a bluff. He believed that the danger in the State-to-day was the materialistic spirit which was prevalent; man was treated more as a function than a man. He believed that religion should be taught in the schools—ethical teachings, to show that man's duty was to spiritualize the secular. It should be impressed upon the scholars that life is a vocation. Dr. Milligan said that it was written over a man's tomb in France, "Born a man and died a grocer," and he thought if life continued to be secularized as it was to-day this might well be written over many graves in Canada.

"Commas and Such Like."

The following from London Spare Moments, has been going the rounds of the press of the Continent, but it is worthy of repetition, if only for the sake of the moral.

Recently a school inspector arrived at a small town in Germany and requested the Mayor to accompany him on a tour of inspection round the schools.

The Mayor, as he put on his hat, muttered to himself:

"I should like to know why that ass has come so soon again, a remark which the inspector overheard, but affected to ignore."

Arrived at the first school, he began to examine the pupils in punctuation, but was told by the Mayor:

"We don't trouble about commas and such like."

The inspector merely told one of the boys to write on the blackboard:

"The Mayor of Ritzbuttel says the inspector is an ass."

"Now," he added, "put a comma after 'Ritzbuttel' and another after 'inspector.'"

The boy did so.

The Mayor is believed to have changed his opinion as to the value of commas.

Who Was the Loser?

An exchange presents the following problem in finance: "A banker, sauntering home, saw a £5 note lying on the curbstone. Of course he picked it up and took the number, in order to find the owner. While at home his wife remarked that the butcher had sent in a bill for meat amounting to £5. The only money he had found with him was the money he had found, which he gave her and she paid the butcher. The butcher paid it to a farmer for a calf, and the farmer paid it to the merchant; who in turn paid it to the washerwoman, and she, owing the banker £5, went to the banker and paid her note. The banker recognized the note as the one he had found and which up to that time had settled £25 of debt. On a more careful consideration he found the note counterfeit."

Japan's Democratic Emperor.

There is no barbaric splendor about the court of Japan, nor does the Emperor insist on fantastic forms of homage. He is just a plain individual. His guests he receives standing, and he enters freely into conversation with all. There is scarcely a subject that does not interest him, or one on which he is not well informed. A delightful host, it is his custom to surround himself with clever men—men who are the shining lights of their professions. Engineers, artists, musicians, writers, soldiers, scientists—every class of persons who have won distinction is welcome at the royal table, for it is one of the characteristics of His Majesty that in the distribution of his favors he is thoroughly impartial.

How to Get Rich.

Take a quantity of silica costing one-fourth the price of oil; mix it with oil, and sell the compound to the public at the price of pure oil; offer "prizes" with the compound to make it sell. It is such a compound the public get when they buy common soaps. In Sunlight Soap—Octagon Bar—the public buy a pure and well-made soap. Sunlight Soap reduces expense by prolonging the life of the articles washed with it, which is much more profitable to the public, than common soaps with "prizes." 206
