My dear Will,

This is a beautiful New

Year's morning and we have just received your loving letter from Ottawa, bearing its burden of kind thought and good wishes. Thank you for it and the good message we received from you yesterday afternoon telling of the safe arrival of the little Christmas remembrances sent by May, the boy and myself. You will realize that a sales packet it was to get this message from you, when you read the enclosed letter which we had received only 24 hours before. As a matter of fact May had made out the bills of lading very carefully, but with the usual lateness under government ownership in this country, the man who should have been at the Union Station to attend to the matter, had supposed there would be nothing more doing for that day and had gone home
