

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can give.

They need to be started right. The "Prescription" aids and promotes the proper functions, corrects the delicate weaknesses and derangements that might become chronic, establishes regularity and health, lessens pain.

They want a nourishing, supporting, strengthening tonic, such as an experienced physician has especially prepared for the female system, in the "Prescription."

In every "female complaint"

In every "female complaint" and weakness, and in all nervous conditions, if it doesn't benefit or noney will be returned.

cure, the money will be returned.

Miss MaGue Jackson, of Barbreck, St. Landry Purish, Lat., says: "I was lying sick for some time with female complaints, and all the medicine my friends gave me did me no good. Death was approaching; all my friends had plan me up to die. I heard of your wonderful medicine, and I bought two bottles of it, and before I had taken the last, I got entirely well. I am still enjoying good health, and expect to praise your medicine every where I go,"

FOR THE SICK ROOM!

JEYES' FLUID

The Great English Non - Poisonous Disinfectant

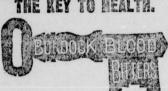

As used in Her Majesty's Household, and by Prof. Koch of Berlin. Used in Hospitals, Prisons and Colleges for Diptheria, Scarlet Fever and for other infectious diseases. I gallon makes 4 barrels strong Disinfectant.

HOBBS HARDWARE CO. Agents, London, Ont.

THE KEY TO MEALTH.

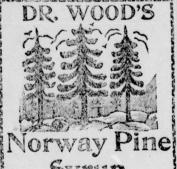

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the sys-tem, all the impurities and foul humors tem, ail the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspensia, Headaches, Dizziness, Hearthurn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK SLOOD BITTERS.

For Sale by all Dealers.

For Sale by all Dealers. T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

Syrup. Rich in the lung-healing virtues of the Pine combined with the scothing and expectorant properties of other pectoral herbs and barks.

A PERFECT CURE FOR COUGHS AND COLDS Hoarseness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Croup and all THROAT, BRONCHIAL and LUNG DISEASES, Obstinate coughs which resist other remedies yield promptly to this pleasant pluy syrup. esist other remedies yield promptly to the leasant piny syrup.

PRICE 250. AND BOG. PER BOTTLE.

ONTARIO STAINED GLASS WORKS

STAINED GLASS FOR CHURCHES. PUBLIC AND PRIVATE BUILDINGS furnished in the best style and at prices low WORKS: 484 RICEMOND STREET

PLUMBING WORK

Opp. Masonic Temple. SMITH BROS Plumbers and Heating Engineers ondon, Ont. Telephone 538, cents for Poorless Water Heaters

BOYS IF YOU ARE INTELLIGENT and honest enough to sell goods, and honest enough to make prompt returns, address J J. HAZELTON, Guelph, Ont., and send 15 couts for a sample of the fastest selling noveity in Canada. Big Profits.

LINKED LIVES.

By Lady Gertrude Douglas.

CHAPTER XXIX. BACK TO GLASGOW.

"Life is real, life is earnest, And the grave is not its goal -LONGFELLOW. On a gloomy December afternoon.

four years after the events described in the foregoing chapter, and exactly fourteen years from the commence-ment of this story, Mabel Forrester finds herself again in Glasgow.

It is the same sort of weather as it was on the former occasion. Not a whit more cheerful is the aspect outside the window, and within the same oom, in the same hotel, everything looks pretty much as it did fourteen years ago — that is to say, everything except the occupants of the room. There were two then — now there is only one, and she is no longer a bright, careless child, but a sober, grave woman of six-and-twenty.

Mabel is much altered. At a first glance you would scarcely recognize her. All the fresh roundness of her girlhood is gone forever; she looks worn and thin, and her brow is deeply lined for one still so young. Her eyes, however, are unchanged; though their usual expression is melancholy, they have lost none of their brilliancy. Her hair, too, is of the same beautiful auburn tint as formerly, and she does not look unhappy.

Mabel is only one of those to whom spring time was so very bright and long that it left no place for summer. "I had almost given you up Geordie – this is kind!" Autumn came upon her just when her summer was beginning, and she knows that autumn, though it bears no re semblance to glad spring, may often bring with it a peculiar charm of its

I have passed over the four years which immediately followed the breaking off of her engagement to Hugh, first, because my story is already too long; secondly, because the sorrow I should have to describe is a sorrow not to be lightly treated, and I would rather say of the events of those four years only that which is absolutely necessary. Neven for one single moment has Mabel regretted the step she took when she became a Catholic. Bitter, in-Neven for one single momen leed, beyond all words was the sacrifice that step entailed, but Mabel, thanks to Hugh's noble behavior, was not tried beyond her strength. She had had wonderful help to support her through the first season of her trial, such help as to converts especially is immeasur-

An! who can tell what are those early days of a convert's life? It is not that with the novelty wears away also the charm of the new religion. that with additional experience comes the blight of disappointment; nor is it, again, because all was bathed in a radiance of enchanted light, that the convert looks back to the first days of his admission into the Church with such you wanted some north-country air. unutterable fondness; for those who have been many years in the bosom of the Church will not refuse this tribute to their Alma Mater, that after any number of years, they are daily learning fresh lessons of her glorious beauty. They will tell you how by experience they have found out that the well of living water with which the Catholic Church refreshes her thirsty children is fathomless. Let no one be deluded by the prophecies of disapwhich borderers on Rome are so often arrested on the threshold of the Church. Nothing can e more false than such warnings. Show me but a true son of Holy gow?" Church, and he will indignantly deny that his Mother has grown less beautiful because he knows her better. The religion of Catholics never loses its charm, but there rests undoubtedly over the early days of conversion a peculiar golden sunshine; the first smile of God's welcome to the wanderer come home. This was the sunshine which made Mabel's cross a possible one to endure. All through the agony of the long struggle that smile was upon her, comforting when all earthly comfort would have been unavailing, reality. The first year after her conversion was spent at Vrananches. Jessie, to whom Elvanlee was no less full than to Mabel of painful associations, gladly availed herself of any excuse for remaining abroad. She had been greatly distressed, not by Mabel's change of religion, but by the consequences it entailed-all the more so because the matter was totally incomprehensible so her, and she felt herself n a measure guilty and responsible for the sorrow which had come upon Hugh and her sister-in-law. When, therefore, she became convinced that all her attempts to put matters straight between them were quite useless, she easily abandoned the idea of returning to Elvanlee, and took the Chateau St Anne for another whole year. following Winter was passed in Italy, the Summer in Switzerland, and then, in order that her children might ac quire the German language, Jessie ook up her abode in Dresden.

strengthening her, and making happi ness, even along the "Via Crucis," a

The longer she put off her return to England, the less inclined she felt to go back; nor was it until the Summer immediately preced period I have now reached in my tory, that, after four years' absence, Elvanlee Castle became once more her home. Mabel had been her constant ompanion, and, of course, went back with her to Elvanlee. Very painful, even after years of preparation, was that return; but my own house in Carlton Terrace; the Mabel bore it, as she had borne all lease falls in this Lady-day, does it the rest, bravely. She was changed - | not?"

very much changed - no one could deny it. The girl was all gone out of her. A grave, yet not altogether saddened woman who answered to the name of Mabel Forrester—a women in "Yes, I can, and what is more, I will!" answered Mabel, with quiet decision. "It is not that I came to consult you about, Geordie. I want to experience several years older than she really was—a women who, having known what it meant to love passion— ately, and yet, at the call of duty, to forego that love, could never be the know from you all about the and whether I can have it in March.

joyous, light-hearted creature she had once been, but who, nevertheless, having learned the secret of true peace, could endure with a spirit of calm hopefulness which shed a softened glow over her own life and other

She still corresponded with Hugh — she still wore his betrothal ring. There had been no renunciation of the love vowed between them. Though, by the will of God, separated probably for ever on earth, both had realized that the promise binding their two hearts inextricably together, had been to endure beyond that moral life of which the grave is the goal. Life was real-life to Mabel was earnest; and though physically she had suffered much, the tone of her mind was as brave, as hopeful, as enterprising as

She had stood for some minutes looking out into the dreary street, lost in a dreamy retrospect of the far past, when there came a knock at the door. Mabel, having carelessly answered, "Come in," a watter announced "Dr Græme."

Mabel came forward with out-

"Given me up, eh !-why ?-didn't

"So I was, but that good creature.

MacLeod, came riding after me.

Mary opened the telegram, and sent him off instantly. Well, Mabel,

"Do you know, Geordie, this is the

were in the night you and I first made

Why, it must have been just about this time ten, twelve — no, fourteen years ago, Mabel. Heigh ho! but times are changed! You are changed

-too much changed," added the Doctor looking attentively at Mabel.

"Why, bless my soul, what have those foreigners been doing with

"Yes, I have ; but just let her be a bit. I have a deal more to hear about yourself first, Mabel. I'll tell you bout that young vagabond presently.

"I am well, Geordie - quite well.

"I have not the slightest idea; you do you get on with your brother in you know they live with me. I could not spare Mary. But now then, Mabel, what brought you to Glas-

"I am on my way to Glendower with Jessie. Glasgow is en route, so I let her go on, and I stayed here a night just to see you, Geordie. Jessie has told me some news that I have been expecting for a long while; it has set me thinking of my own plans, and I want your advice."

" Is Lady Forrester going to marry again?" asked the doctor.

"Yes," said Mabel briefly, the tears

"Hm!" was the doctor's response, after which he fell a thinking Pres-deal at Dresden — a Sir James Tay-leure," said Mabel slowly, as though the subject were distasteful to her.

he looked up. "Who is it?"

'A man of whom we saw a good

"Not much, Geordie. Perhaps it is foolish prejudice on my part, but oh! when I think of my darling brother, of Guy, I — I can't help it," she said,

"Almost immediately; they are to be married from Glendower three weeks hence, and then they are going abroad again for the rest of the Win

Wilfred goes to school, and Jessie will take the two younger ones with

"I, Geordie !- I am coming home, wished me to join them abroad at the end of a month, and Sir James wrote

Elvanlee or the Hermitage?"

course, goes with it.

at do you call home, Mabel?

the tears coming quick and fast.

glistening in her eyes.

"Do you like him?"

Mabel shook her head.

"When is it to be?"

"And the children?"

"And you, Mabel?"

said

home.

"Mary is aye flourishing, the bairns are fine, and my respected brother in-law and myself get on well together;

Mary would have been so pleased. "Thanks, Geordie, I know. How are Mary and the children? and how Do you know why I asked you to meet me here to-night?'

How are you, Mabel? You look as it

Nonsense !- you don't mean it !"

him off instantly. Well, Mabe welcome home to Scotland once more you know well enough I would come?

you might have been out.'

lives around her.

it had ever been, oher ardent youth.

stretched hands.

acquaintance?'

you?

"Yes, you can; the people had applied for a renewal of the lease, but you need not grant it. Why don't you come and live with us, Mabel?—it would be much better," said the doctor, gravely.
"Because I choose to have a home of my own, Geordie. You need not distress vourself : I am not going to do any thing extraordinary. You remember poor old 'Rawley,' as we used to call her in our school-days?'

"Don't I?" laughed the doctor,

some particular recollection connected with Rawley just then tickling his fancy.

"She wrote to me only a few days ago in great distresss; her pupil, to whom she went when she left me, is now grown up, and Rawley feels her-self too old to recommence another peful, as enterprising as education, poor old lady. I am going sen, even in the days of to have her to live with me. It will be gave her the shilling I shall never fora kindness to her, and, at the same time, I shall secure the services of a that I do," said Doctor Græme, standrespectable chaperon," said Mabel, smiling. "She won't interfere with me, and we shall pull very well together."
"Not a bad arrangement," marked Doctor Græme. "I hope she will be amiable, though; the old lady never liked me, I fancy. Do you remember how, whenever she found us talking in the library, she used to come with her eternal, 'Now, Mabel, my ou know well enough I would come?" love, haven't you got your music to "I knew you would if you could, practise, or your Italian exercises to Geordie, but my telegram must have prepare?' and she used to look daggers at me meanwhile." taken you by surprise. I was afraid at me meanwhile."

"Poor dear Rawley!" laughed Mabel again; "she used to think I was in love with you, Geordie."
"Were you, Mabel?" asked Doctor Græme, leaning forward, and gazing with a curious, wistful gaze into the sweet, grave eyes, that met his withvery same room that auntie and I out the smallest confusion, as Mabel answered simply: "As children often are, I suppose was. Geordie : you were so kind to me. could not help it. But don't let's talk of all that now-it's gone by for ever. Will you see about this busi ness for me? 'Yes, gladly-thank you, Mabel, returned Doctor Græme earnestly; it was the only acknowledgment of love he had ever either asked or received from any woman. "And in the meanwhile, until your own house is ready, may I tell Mary you will pay us your long-promised visit?" he resumed, after a short pause. "Yes, I should like it very much, Geordie. Now tell me what you know of poor Katie. She is at present in the Bridewell in this town; she is what they call nere 'up for the Lords'-that is, she will take her trial at the next assizes for a very grave crime."

"Oh! Georgie, what for? — for stealing again?" "Much worse, Mabel; she has been drowning her child and attempting should have come to Edinburgh.

> "How very dreadful! Can't I see her, Geordie?"
> "I don't know but you might, perhaps. I know the governor of the Bridewell," said Doctor Græme re-flectively. "How late can you stay to-morrow?

Till 2 o'clock. Oh, do try, Geordie! How did you happen to dear she was in prison? Do you know anything of vears?" "Not a word. I happened to be in the Court the day she was brought before the magistrates. This is how it came about : Mary, you must know, has lately developed a strange fancy she picks up all the ragamuffin lads she can lay her hand upon, and tries to train them to domestic service They repay her attentions much as might be expected, by breaking all the crockery in the establishment, lying, thieving, and committing every enormity, until either my patience o Gordon's becomes exhausted, and one or the other of us sends the young wretches about their business. the boys lately absconded; we heard no more of him until a fortnight later. when he was taken up in Glasgow for shop lifting. The rascal had the im pudence to give himself out as a servant of mine, so I was called up to the Court in consequence. I had to wait some time before his case came on, and it was there I saw our old friend Katie She pleaded 'Not Guilty 'to the charge, so was committed for trial. As far as I could make out, the case against her is this: The villain who is the child's father has been convicted of some very neavy misdemeanor, and at the former assizes was sentenced to twenty-one years of penal servitude. It appears that he was arrested at last through the treachery of one of his own set, a girl, an elder sister of this Katie's.'

"Maggie," interrupted Mabel-"it must have been Maggie. Katie always hated her.

aid Mabel, with a quiet smile. They were both most kind; Jessie "Yes, Maggie - it was Maggieyou are right. I remembered her again when I saw her, though I had seen her to me twice urging me to do so; but I only once-the night I went hunting would rather not-I would rather be at after your protegee, Mabel.

"Well, but go on, Geordie-tell me all," exclaimed Mabel eagerly.

Surely you will not live alone at "It seems that jealousy existed between the sisters. Apropos of this "No. Geordie, I could not do that, man Cameron, there was a quarrel, in even if I wished it, which I do not which Katie very nearly killed Maggie; Elvanlee Castle will be let until Wilfrid and then, in a fit of insanity or intoxicomes of age, and The Hermitage, of cation, threw both herself and her By home I mean child into the Clyde. It was still day light when she committed the act; two sailors on the Broomielaw Bridge, who

"But, Mabel—impossible! you can't live by yourself," began the doctor, looking bewildered. were passing at the time, saw her, and jumped into the river after her. They succeeded in saving her, but the child jumped into the river after her. They succeeded in saving her, but the child was dead before its body could be recovered. She says it was dead before she threw herself into the water, and that she did so in despair, because she had nothing left to her on earth to care for. However, as her sister swears to having seen the child alive, and in perfect health, only half an hour previously, Katie's story is not believed and she is committed for trial."

"How very dreadful! Oh! Geordie, will she be tried for murder?" "I don't know-scarcely, I should think. She seems to have been in a state in which she could not have been quite accountable for her actions; but if you want to see her, Mabel, I will go and look up the Governor. do you dine? "At six. You will come back, won't you, Geordie?"

"Yes; but, Mabel, you are not crying. are you?"

"I can't help it, Geordie. Poorpoor little Katie! everything here reminds me so of that starved, shivering child, whose look of joy when get. Don't you remember her?' "Poor thing !- poor wee lassie !ing still for a moment, hat in hand, and gazing fixedly into the glowing firelight while his mind travelled back through the fourteen years to that wintry even ing, when, under the gates of the gloomy Bridewell, he had listened to the little wailing voice crying so piti-

"STURDY BEGGARS."

Within a short time after Henry VIII., in the interest of "Reform, had confiscated the monasteries and their estates and had divided what h did not keep for himself among his favorites, thus really founding the great landed aristocracy of England, English towns and villages, and the highways, began to swarm with healthy men begging for money, clothing, or food. Until the era of Reform such a thing had not been known in England. And hence arose the laws against "sturdy beggars, which first appeared when England had broken with the religion that had been from the first the inspiring principle of its civilization.

A generation ago beggars in any numbers were practically unknown in the United States. The Public school geographies of that day nearly all inormed American children that beggars were plentiful in Italy and Spain, and American travellers on their return nome were accustomed to speak of these beggars as a "picturesque" fea-ture of those lands. Indeed one American of that day, happily still live and an honor to his native land for his versatile abilities, in a book which he entitled "Roba di Roma," devotes a whole chapter to an almost loving description of the beggars of Rome, forty York? There must be thousands of them. They resort principally in the well-to-do parts of the town and in the approaches of the elevated railroads and the ferries. They are most decidedly not picturesque. They have none of the amiable traits or winning ways that Mr. Story found in his Roman beggars, who bestowed their prayers and blessings alike on those who gave and those who refused These New York beggars of to day almost demand the alms they seek; not history during these last few in words, perhaps, but in tone of voice Their manner of appearance is almost timid man or woman, the the effect is probably the same. sad state of affairs. It is another evidence of the decay of religion among the great mass of the people whom Protestantism first and then Agnosticism, in its many phases have affected. The idea of God has apparently disappeared from their minds. The visible world is all that they live for or believe in, and when this affords them nothing but discomfort or even positive distress they naturally become filled with envy and hatred for those whom fortune has not treated so ill. The Catholic Church has a great ask before it in the United States. The missionary field under these new onditions is quite as important, and, n its own way, just as arduous as was hat of converting the Roman world when the old paganism had died out and mens' minds had become indisposed to think of religion. The new conditions of course calls for new Certain it is, however, that nethods. nothing else than the Catholic religion can provide the remedy that is required for the selfishness of the prosperous and the bitterness that are destined to be one of the greatest future dangers of the Republic .- N. Y. Cath

WHAT DO YOU take medicine for? Because you want to get well, or keep well, of course. Remember Hood's Sarsaparilla

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. HAGYARD'S Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds; hoarseness, oronchists, asthma, whooping cough; and all bronchial and lang troubles. Price 25c. per bottle, or five for $1.00.

five for $4.00.

The Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Bowels, &c., act as so many waste gates for the escape of effete matter and gases from the body. The use of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery helps them to discharge their duty. Mr. W. H Lester, H. M. Customs, Toronto, writes: "I have personally tested the health-giving properties of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and can testify as to its great value.

A HEALING, SOOTHING SALVE for cuts, burns, bruises, wounds and sores—Victoria Carbolic Save. Minard's Liniment cures Burns, &c.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME.

Vital Truths to be Gathered from a Study of the Childhood of Jesus

There is surely a vital truth for our own lives to be gathered from the in-terpretation of the childhood of Jesus. It gives us a deeper sense of the sacred ness and the power of the home. The perfect manhood of Him whom all Christendom adores as the Son of God was matured and moulded in the tender shelter of the home. It was there that He felt the influences of truth and grace. To that source we may trace some of the noblest qualities of His human character. And yet, if there is anything which Christendom the possibility of such a home as that in which Jesus grew to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Is it not true

'The world is too much with us, late and soon, Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers."

The false and cruel conditions of industrial competition, and the morbid overgrowth of great cities where human lives are crowded together to the point of physical and moral suffocation, have raised an enormous barrier between great masses of mankind and the home which their natural instincts desire and seek. The favored classes, on the other hand, are too much alienated by false standards of happiness, by the mania of publicity, by the in-sane rivalries of wealth, to keep their reverence for the pure and lovely ideals of domestic life. A new aristocracy is formed which lives in mammoth hotels, and a new democracy which exists in gigantic tenements. ments increase in spendor and frequency, but private joys grow rare and difficult, and even the capacity for them seems to be withering, at least in the two extremes of human society where the home wears a vanishing

And yet-so runs my simple and grateful creed - this appearance is only transient and superficial. Deep in the heart of humanity lies the domestic passion, which will survive the mistakes of a civilization not yet fully enlightened, and prove the truth of the saying: "Before the fall, Paradise was man's home; since the fall, home has been his Paradise." great silent classes of mankind who stand between the extremes, not yet spoiled by luxury and just beginning to awake to an active compassion for the sorrows of the homeless multitude, cherish the ideal of the home, the rest ing-place of love, the nursery of innocent childhood, the seed plot of the manly virtues, defended even in the lowliest cottage against all rude intrusions and desecrating powers, and ruled by

"Pure religion, breathing household laws." To be loval to this ideal, to realize it in their own lives and help to make it possible for others, is indeed the nobl est and the most useful service that men and women can render to the age. For, after all, it is only from such quiet and holy homes as that in which the Child Jesus lived at Nazareth that the children of the future can come, who shall feel, as manhood dawns, that they must be about their Father's business. and follow the Christ, the King, to the serene and bloodless triumph of His kingdom of childlike faith, and hope, and love for all mankind.

+[Extract from "The Christ-Child in Art." by Henry Van Dyke. Pablished by Harper & Bros., New York.]

An A. P. A. Opportunity.

Rabi Baba isa Nestorian from Persia, who is a man of unusual abilities, as that of the footpad and, with byterian Board of Foreign Missions. The employment was not sufficiently remunerative for him and he threw up the contract. From the Presby terians he appealed to the Episcopalians, expressing a desire to join that denomination. He was accordingly "confirmed" in New York city. Growing tired of his new associations, he applied to Archbishop Corrigan to be received into the Catholic Church and sent back as a priest to labor in his native country. pondence with Persia, instituted by the Archbishop, could be completed, Rabi Baba went to Chicago and was received into the Baptist donomination by Dr. Henson, of that city. done this he wrote back to the Arch-bishop that he had been received into the Catholic Church in Chicago. Since this last performance Rabi Baba has not been heard of. What is the A. P. A. doing that they neglect to put this Oriental tramp in the lecture field? - Philadelphia Catholic Times.

TESTIMONIALS published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla are as reliable and worthy of contidence as if from your most trusted neighbor.

trusted neighbor.

Out of Sorts—Symptoms, Headache, loss of appetite, furred tongue, and general indisposition. These symptoms, if neglected, develop into acute disease. It is a trite saying that an "ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and a little attention at this point may save months of sickness and large doctor's bills. For this complaint take from two to three of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills on going to bed, and one or two for three nights in succession, and a cure will be effected.

Toronto Testlmony.

DDAR SIRS.—Two years ago I had a bad attack of biliousness, and took one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and can truly re-commend it to any suffering from this complaint.

omplaint.
MRS. CHARLES BROWN, Toronto, MRS. CHARLES BROWN, 107010, Thousands like her. — Tena McLeod, Severn Bridge, writes: "I owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL for caring me of a severe cold that troubled me nearly all last winter." In order to give a quietus to a hacking cough, take a dose of Dr. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL thrice a day, or oftener if the cough spells render it necesor oftener if the cough spells render it no

Minard's Liniment relieves Neural