Wrabness Church, Essex, has been reopened after extensive restoration. In the course of the work part of an arch over the original Norman doorway was uncovered, and a stone coffin slab of the thirteenth century found, and is now built into the wall of the new porch. The very interesting font which was rescued from ruin a few years ago by the late Bishop of Colchester has been carefully replaced at the west end, and a complete list of the rectors of Wrabness from the year 1381 now hangs in the church.
