A' New York despatch says : Youn' Harry Turner, who reported to the police on Friday that he had seen Reilly and Dooley murder the unknown man, was looked up as a witness. On Friday night a reporter called to interview him, when he shocked and surprised everybody by confess-ing to the killing himself. He met the stranger at the foot-of the Harlem bridge, staïrway, he said, and assaulted him. After beating him to unconsciousness he was frightened away by a couple of passers by. When he returned to rifle the man's pockets, he found that he had regained consciousness, and he again assaulted him. This time, after a flerce and long straggle, in the course of which both parties gravi-tated down the dock to the river's edge, Turner got the upper hand and threw the man into the water. Then, to clear himself of any possible suspicion, he told the story related to the officer.
