THE HENDERSHOTT MURDER TRIAL.

The Crown Endeavoring to Prove the Guilt of the Prisoners.

St. Thomas, March 9.—Mr. Osler, in addressing the jury in the Middlemarch murder trial yesterday, said the Crown would undertake to prove that the death was not caused by the tree, but by an axe or some such instrument in the hands of a man, and would endeavor to connect the prisoners therewith. He touched upon the circumstances of the taking out of large insurances upon the life of the deceased Hendershott in favor of his uncle the prisoner, John Hendershott, and that evidence would be forthcoming to prove suspicious circumstances connected therewith, and that the clder prisoner had made many incriminating statements in made many incriminating statements in reference thereto.

Jas. A. Bell, county engineer of Elgin, described his visit to the woods and the making of plans of the scene of the tragedy, which will be used at the trial. At the afternoon session Edward Wardell, a neighbor of the prisoner Hendershott, testified that in his opinion the patches of blood in the vicinity of the tragedy were as fresh as that found under the body.

John Lyle also gave evidence as to the freshness of the blood stains and although he was subjected to a severe cross-examination by the defence his testimony was not shaken.

The next witness was John Jones, the B. W. & S. Ste. M. Ry.
