BALDOON.

The Orchestra concert, unavoidably postponed from last Wednesday, was given on Easter Monday evening. A postponed from last Wednesday, was given on Easter Monday evening. A very fair crowd found their way to the hall, and the curtain rose at 9 o'clock. The inimitable Tom Adams, LL. B., of Green Valley, was invited to the chair, and to say that he filled the bill is stating the case rather mildly. He is, as the boys say, a whole band wagon, driver and whip. He referred to his boyhood days in Dover and was glad to see so many old-time friends. The several numbers on the program called for recitations by Miss Baxter, of Chatham, music by the Baldoon Orchestra, songs by Mrs. and Master Pardo, of the Valley, readings by Mr. Haylock, and last but not least, music by the Dover Centre Orchestra. The weather was not very favorable for a very large attendance, but everybody seemed pleased.

Farmers are starting in their spring work, and a good warm rain is just the thing needed to make things boom.

We are glad to see George Wemp able to be out again, also Norman Wemp, who is not yet free from his rheumatic enemy. With warm weather returning he hopes to be all right. Councillor Rankin is getting all right again, and the mill is buzzing away.

Some of the vats were empty the other day, and the opportunity for cleaning the machinery was considered good. In the centre of each vat is an upright shaft. To this are attached two sets of large paddles, the edges of which are sharp as knives. These are driven around at high speed, and the boiling malt is thoroughly mixed.

Sapiro had been cleaning and sharpening the huge blades and told Me Kay, his assistant, to go to the next room and raise the lever that allows the malt to flow in. He wished to see if it was in working order. He remained in the vat and a moment later was horrified to see the great blades moving.

Sapiro also began to move, for be rightly concluded that McKay had raised the wrong lever and that he would have to keep moving until the mistake could be rectified. But fright had incapacitated McKay, who heard the cries of Sapiro and was soon at the side of the vat. What he there saw transfigured him and robbed him
