WHY NOT OWN
AN AUTOMOBILE?

If automobiles are needed anywhere at all they are in the country. One of the speakers of the Women's Institute, at Guelph, recently pointed out that the time was near at hand when farmers' wives would run their own automobiles. Nor is the prediction a visionary one. Like the telephone and the trolley, the automobile seems destined to add to the comfort of country life, and the cost will not interfere with your buying. We can sell at a mere fraction of original cost. These cars are taken by us as part payment for the new and latest models, and are such as we can thoroughly recommend. Any machine we send out is guaranteed to be in first-class condition, and beyond the fact that second-hand cars are not this year's style, there is nothing wrong with them in any way. We use them as a means of introduction to the country trade, and make the values extra special to encourage quick buying. If interested, send your name and address for fuller particulars.

Good Second-Hand Machines

The Better Prayer.

I thank thee, Lord, for strength of arm To win my bread,
And that beyond my need is meat
For friend and foe.
I thank thee much for bread to live, I thank thee more for bread to give.

I thank thee, Lord, for ungrudging love To feed the poor,
And that beyond my need is room
For friend and foe.
I thank thee much for place to rest,
But more for shelter for my guest.

I thank thee, Lord, for lavish love On me bestowed, Though to share with loveless folk To ease their load.
Thy love to me I'll hold dear, Yet cheer & Thy love I share.

Ion.

among the stars. Failure seemed impossible, conquest certain. And if success came, it would not be his; he was the vehicle of some Higher Power, his warfare but the vindication of the council chambers of the Jehovah. He rested in that thought, conscious of his entire relinquishment of self. Henceforth he was a surrendered man, his life a surrendered life.
In the lateral rhythm of things he had found his place; no longer would he know the vain perturbations of pride, envy, or inordinate desire, nor would he have found the peace which he had found the peace of understanding. The battle was over, well, but for him the issue was assured.

In the meantime the sensation created by Gaunt's action was immense.
"It is a dreadful mistake," said Tucker in a lamentable voice. "If he had only consulted me."
"He is intoxicated with vanity," said Small in angry tones. "Madison Square Garden," indeed? You mark my words, he won't attract a hundred people, and it holds twenty thousand."

"He's mad," said Roberts vindictively. "I told him so long ago. I saw it coming on, and warned him. The church will never recover from to-day's disgrace."
All over the church people gathered in groups discussing the affair. The verdict appeared general that Gaunt was mad. It was the biggest of the scheme that stunned them. Had Gaunt resignedly to accept another call, or to enter on some evangelic work upon a humble scale, they could have understood it; but the idea of Madison Square Garden, of a League of Service which was meant to absorb all churches, and supplant them, overwhelmed them.

There were others, however, to whom the very vigors of the idea was its attraction. Within an hour of the close of the service there was a hasty editorial discussion in the office of the most influential newspaper in New York. Its editor had been one of those who had heard Gaunt.

"He will go far—he has a great idea, and he believes in it," was his outspoken comment.

He was a man accustomed to handling big questions in a big way. In his editorial of the 16th, "I will write such an editorial on this. It is the biggest thing that has happened in a generation, I tell you."
"No bigger than the insurance scandal, surely," said the sub-editor.
"Pooh, that only touched men's pockets. This touches their thoughts, themselves, their souls. In a month's time nothing else will be talked of from New York to San Francisco."

The incredulous sub-editor went away endeavoring to fortify himself with the recollection of other occasions on which his chief had proved mysteriously right when everyone else had supposed him wrong; and Butler sat down to write his editorial. He was a striking editorial, everyone acknowledged that next morning.
It was one of those perfectly balanced pieces of reasoning and generalization, which can be achieved only by trained skill, at its highest point of effectiveness; yet it had been in it, a flame of passionate conviction, all the more impressive by being restrained.

Butler noticed with a grim pleasure that at all events he had not misinterpreted the sensational value of the incident, for three quarters of New York papers gave full reports of Gaunt's address, with more or less sympathetic comments.

Yet it must be owned Butler was not without certain qualms of misgiving. He knew too well the levity of the New York mind. Its strange caprices, its rapidity with which it enthroned popular idols, and the recklessness with which it forgot them. It came to him suddenly that it was ten chances to one that Gaunt was not the sort of man who knew how to organize victory. And this was a case in which victory must be organized. He resolved to see Gaunt at once.

never one against religion. And now, as Gaunt spoke, he found his own early ideas of religion miraculously re-invigorated. A church wholly freed from creed, wholly based on service—yes, he had once imagined such a thing to dream of at least; and here at last was a man who believed in it not as a dream, but as a practicable reality.

There was another thing, too, which attracted Butler. He knew, better than most men, for from his desk he looked out upon the centres of thought in every country, how true it was that in every country there was a revolt against the organized forms of religion.
The indignities of that revolt could be counted by millions. What if the time had really come to interpret this revolt, to rescue it from the cold shadows of negation, to weld its ideals into a vast constructive force? What if the man had come at last capable of this crusade which would appeal to all the thinking people of America, and not of America alone, but of all lands not heathen?

His blood thrilled at the thought, and then lurched with caution.
The supreme journalistic sense was now thoroughly awake and vigilant.
He was tempted to play for such tremendous stakes, but he must be sure that he made no error in his judgment.
He listened to Gaunt with the keenest criticism, weighing every word, watching every gesture, absorbed in the endeavor to read his soul. He satisfied himself of Gaunt's sincerity and the dynamic force of his ideas.
But there still remained one question.
They were big ideas, but could he interpret them in a big way? This there came the abrupt announcement of a League of Service, and a movement which needed nothing less than the vast auditorium of Madison Square Garden for its inauguration! Butler's glance shot in him. He saw at a glance all the possibilities of the new movement; he felt rather than recognized the advent of the "psychologic moment."

"He will go far, he has a great idea, I believe in it," he said. "And I will support him," he added.

"That was why there was a hasty editorial consultation in the office of The Daily Light, while Gaunt was consuming with his soul in Central Park."

"Give it headlines, and two columns at least," he said. "I will write an editorial on it. This is the biggest thing that has happened in a generation, I tell you."

scandal, surely," said the sub-editor.

Doctor Said Only Zam-Buk Could Cure Her Eczema.

In view of the numerous cures which Zam-Buk has worked when all else has failed, there is little wonder that in the end the doctors attending, Mrs. J. P. St. Dennis, of 305, Thompson Street, Winnipeg, should tell her there was nothing but Zam-Buk could cure her. The result showed the far-seeing wisdom of the practitioner, and having been completely cured by Zam-Buk, Mrs. St. Dennis gives her experience for the benefit of other sufferers.

She says: "Eczema started on one side of my face and nose. At first my nose felt sore, similar to what one feels when having a bad cold. I paid no attention to this, thinking it would pass away in a day or so, but to my surprise it got worse. The nose then became swollen and hard, and turned a purplish red, as well as part of the cheek on that side of my face. As the disease developed, pimples and ulcers broke out, then the skin cracked in places and peeled off in flakes, leaving my face and nose raw and sore. This condition reacted on my general health, and I became very ill. I could get no sleep at night because of the irritation and the pain, and my face was in such a shocking condition that for two months I did not go out of the house.
I applied remedies which were supposed to be good for skin diseases, but in vain. My doctor also treated me, but without effect, until one day he said that the only thing which would now be likely to cure my Zam-Buk.

"Acting on his advice, I procured a supply and found that even the first few applications had a soothing effect on the sores. I left off everything else in favor of this balm, and applied it liberally every day to the affected parts. In a remarkably short time, considering the obstinate nature of my disease, we saw traces of improvement, which encouraged us to persevere with the Zam-Buk treatment. Zam-Buk reduced the inflammation, then the hard swelling began to show traces of leaving, the sores seemed to be less angry, and in about three weeks' time most of the sores were healing nicely. To cut a long story short, I continued with the Zam-Buk treatment until my face was cured completely of all traces of the troublesome and painful eczema."

"Well, then," said Butler, "don't be aboveusing plain and rough weapons.
I don't ask you to lower your standards in any way; but recollect the world is a pretty rough place, dominated by practical forces, and therefore impatient of purely abstract ideas. Do you mind telling me what is the nature of that pile of telegrams and letters which I see upon the table?"

"Not at all," said Gaunt. "Most of them are full of kindly enthusiasm; more than two or three are hostile."
"But do they put no questions?"
"Why yes. Almost everybody wants to know what I propose to do."
"Exactly. They approve the idea, but they want to reduce it to practical forms."

The Apple on the Berry
Bush.

To those particularly interested in the growing of apples an experiment made at Delta, Idaho, will be of value. In the spring of last year Thomas and Francis Hauck, two miners, who keep a garden, and grow strawberries and vegetables, experimented in grafting a scion of a four-year old apple tree into a service berry tree body, and to their delight the tree not only grew but blossomed this year and two well developed yellow apples ripened. The tree from which the scion was cut has never blossomed, yet the scion when grafted into a berry bush blossomed and bore fruit the next year.—La Grande Observer.
