A despatch from Williamsport, Pa-dated Jan 9 says: A terrible storm of wind and rain swept down on West Branch Valley this afternoon and con-siderable damage was done in all direc-tions. In this city a dozen houses were demoliabed. The brick walls of the Damorest foundry department in course of construction, one storey in height, 200 feet long and 50 feet wide, were levelled to the foundation. Several per-sons are reported injured or killed. In bolidays will be allowed. In this order even ticket agents, who, in the summer season, have to work from 6 o'clock in the morning until 11 st night, are included. In It is needless to say that this latest order has created intense dissatisfaction among the railway men, who claim that holidays are allowed in all other branches of the Civil Service. A few days ago a circular informed conductors that all who did not learn to write grammatically and spell surrectly would be reduced, and that all habemen who could not write grammatically and spell surrectly would be reduced, and that all habemen who could not write grammatically and spell correctly would not be promoted.—St. John Sun.
