Except about election times, And then I read for spite.

Subscribers, you can't loose a cent, For eash thus spent is money lent On interest four-fold paid.

My Gran'dad used to make his brags Of living at a day, When papers sold as cheap as rage, And trust was took for pay.

My Grandma', when she had the blues, Would thank her gracious stars
That papers filled with wholesome news Vere scattered every WHARS.

I knew two friends, as much alike As e'er you saw two stumps : And no phrenologist could find A difference in their bumps.

Each had a farm of equal worth, A pretty wife to keep— Three boys—three horses and a cow, A dog and twenty sheep.

One took the papers, and his life Was happier than a king's; His children a'l could read and write, And talk of men and things.

The other took no paper, and While strolling through the wood, A tree fell down upon his crown, And killed him as it should.

Had he been reading of the "news," I'll bet a cent this accident Would not have happened him.

Go then, and take the papers, And pay to-day, nor pray delay, You'll live till you are grey.

An old newsmonger-friend of mine, While dying from a cough, Desired to hear the latest news, While he was going off.

I took the paper and I read He bought a box-and is he dead? No-hearty as a horse. I knew a printer's debtor once.

Rack'd with a scorching fever. Who swore to pay her bill next day, If her disease would leave her. Next morning she was at her work.

Divested of her pain, But did forget to pay her debt, Till taken down again. " Here, Jessey, take those silver wheels, Go pay the printer now !"

With health upon her brow. Why don't you take the papers? Nor from the printer's visage sneak, Because you borrow of his boy,

A paper every week. For he who takes the papers And pays his bill when it is due. Can live in peace with God and man,

And with the printer too. MORTALITY

A STANZA-BY W. WEST

O keenest intellect-fond pelf-Fair beauty's glass and blooming health! Where is your boasted fame! nies and honours raised here. With all the pomp that wealth can share, Are but an empty name.

And virtue vested in her charm, Soothed by friendship's healing balm. Invites my sacred theme. All visionary scenes of love, By heavenly influence will prove.

The subject of a dream. All that is mortal will decay, The Globe itself will melt away, As like the boundless air ; The hand of fate will thus transfix. Time with eternity will mix,

And finish our career.

The ocean's tide will cease to roll, The starry host to gild the pole, No more their glories lend. The Earth will melt with fervent heat, An nature shrink beneath her seat,

The Universe will rend. Then what is wealth, and what renown? The prince that wore the gorgeous crown--Shew me his splendid tomb ; The peasant too of humble birth, Alike is mingled with the earth,

To moulder in its womb. But hark ! a voice thrills nature's vein, That bursts the heavenly dome in twain, And raise their spirits high : Crested in righteous robes they soar,

To dwell in peace for evermore, In mansions of the sky.

MATRIMONIAL ARITHMETIC.—A young lady, being addressed by a gentleman much older than herself, observed, to him, the only objection she had to a union with bim was the probability of his dying before her, and leaving her to feel the sorrow of widowhood. To which he made the following of all sizes, made from Henp grown by himingenious and delicate complimentary re-ply: "Blessed, is the man that has a virtuous wife, for the number of his days

The wide-spread fame of these splendid Periodicals renders it needless to say much in their praise. As literary organs, they stand far in advance of any works of a similar stamp now published, while the political complexion of each is marked by a dignity, candour, and forbarance not often found in works of a party character.

They embrace the views of the three great parties in England—Whig, Tory, and Radical—Blackwood and the London Quarterly are Tory; the Edinbugh Review, Whig; and the Westminster, Radical. The Foreign Quarterly is purely literary, being devoted principally to criticisms on foreign Continental Works.
