-[BROWNING.]

The British people have $403,000,000 in the postoffice saving banks. They are more provident than some give them credit for being. Under the old days of restricted trade the workers lived from hand to mouth, and could save nothing.

By the defeat of a Conservative in the bye-election in Richmond county yesterday, Nova Scotia Liberals gain a seat. Mr. Fielding has now 26 Liberal followers; the Conservative Opposition numbers 12. Liberalism is booming down by the sea.

The Liberal platform, adopted by the great national convention at Ottawa in June, 1893, is comprehensive enough to fight the next Dominion battle upon. Friends as well as opponents should keep to the declaration of principles therein made. Only by doing so can the public be expected to give an intelligent verdict upon the issues raised.

Just before the cold snap set in a correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger seriously argued that history would this year repeat itself, and that we would have a mild winter, followed by a phenomenally dry and hot summer. A lunar cycle is nineteen years, and as the moon influences the tides of the ocean, so, it is argued, does it affect the currents of the atmosphere, the winds, etc. For example, the winter of 1873-74 was remarkably mild, and the summer of 1875 was intensely dry. Everywhere vegetation was ruined through lack of moisture. Nineteen years after, the winter of 1892-93 was open; there was very little frost; and the summer of 1893, with its hard times, was phenomenally hot. The winter of 1875-76 was decidedly mild. Building was proceeded with in almost every month of the year. New Year's Day callers in this city carried their overcoats, and everyone thought that the season had decidedly turned about. Then came the summer of 1876, intensely hot and dry. And so nineteen years brings us the present season—1894-95—and if the weather student is to be trusted, despite the present cold snap, we will have a short winter and a scorching summer.

A NOTABLE BIRTHDAY.

Mr. Gladstone will be 85 years old tomorrow, he having been born in Liverpool on Dec. 29, 1809. The Grand Old Man, our cables inform us, is in the best of health and spirits, and finds it an easy task—or shall we say, pleasure?—to read from ten to eleven hours daily. He is indeed a wonderful man. From the time when he entered political life in 1832, as member for Newark, up to a short time since, he remained in the public arena fighting the battles of freedom and of progress with a zeal, even in his later years, that put to shame every laggard in the land. While thus occupied with public affairs, Mr. Gladstone never omitted the cultivation of domestic virtues, as his care for the aged partner of his life, and his enjoyment of the society of his children and children's children, have amply demonstrated. Mr. Gladstone has always been an omnivorous reader. He is today probably the best-informed man in England, and age does not seem to have any effect on his anxiety to add to his stock of knowledge. It is clear that the Grand Old Man has been a hard worker, but it is equally manifest that he has carefully husbanded his resources. He has rarely worried over anything. By this disposition to take things as they come and make the most of them, be they good, bad or indifferent, and to meet difficulties with a buoyant spirit in a carefully-preserved body, the great Liberal leader owes his phenomenal physical and mental constitution. It is a very difficult thing for a politician of the first rank to let go his hold on public affairs while health and strength lasts, no matter what the age to which he may have attained. But Gladstone had the good sense to retire before physical infirmity made cessation from public duty a matter of compulsion, and he has entered upon what is in all probability the last decade of his life with a serene good health of both body and mind that enables him, in the quiet of his home, to enjoy existence as it is given to few octogenarians to do. No other statesman of the age is so generally known and universally respected as is Mr. Gladstone. In millions of homes today his name is a household word. In every civilized land on the face of the earth he has admirers who will join in wishing him many returns of his natal day, and continued strength to enjoy them.

CANADA WILL MANAGE HER OWN AFFAIRS.

The clearest contribution yet made to the controversy over the Canadian Copyright Act, which the British authorities have so far refused to sanction, is that made by Mr. J. D. Edgar, M.P., in a letter to the London Times, which has been cabled to Canada. Mr. Edgar led in the demand made in the Dominion Parliament that Canada should assert her full right to control copyright within this country, and he therefore writes with a full knowledge of the subject. He points out that though Canadians differ in regard to many matters affecting their welfare, they are united in maintaining the principle set forth in the Copyright Act, which passed Parliament in 1889 without a dissenting voice. Its provisions are not unfair to British authors, though it gave Canadian publishers some rights which placed them more nearly on a level with United States publishers than they were before. It is, Mr. Edgar asserts, defensible as a measure fair to all interests. Continuing, Mr. Edgar says:

"Except in our high tariff on imports from Great Britain, Canadian legislation has never been hostile to the motherland; nor would it be allowed to remain so in the case of copyright, if any grievances were shown to exist. This act provided that it should not come into force until proclamation by the Governor-General, and its operation was thus suspended in order to allow our Government to discuss it with the Colonial Office. More than five years have elapsed and it has not been assented to by the Imperial Government, although most urgent pressure for that purpose has been kept up by the Canadian Government and strong addresses of remonstrance on the subject have been unanimously passed by the Canadian Parliament."

While this conciliatory attitude has been assumed by the people of Canada, the British Copyright Association contends that the Canada Act of 1889 is ultra vires because it interferes with the Imperial Copyright Act of 1842. Mr. Edgar effectively meets this contention by pointing out that as far back as 1846 Earl Grey, Colonial Secretary, in a dispatch sent to all the Governors of the North American colonies, announced that "Her Majesty's Government propose to leave to the local legislatures the duty and responsibility of passing such enactments as they may deem proper for securing both the rights of authors and the interests of the public."

The Confederation Act of 1867 placed "copyright" among the exclusive powers of the Government at Ottawa. Did not that imply a fulfillment of the promise made so expressly by Earl Grey?

As Mr. Edgar points out, it is decidedly unwise for the British Government to refuse to recognize the right of Canada to legislate on so comparatively small a matter as copyright when the Commons of Canada can and do legislate upon matters involving life and death, and can and do raise local military forces, and can and do erect tariffs against the world. Mr. Edgar makes it clear that the Canadian people will not reside from the position which they have unanimously taken up with regard to this copyright question. It is a principle that affects our autonomy as a self-governing country, and if anyone in Great Britain believes that there is ambiguity in regard to the provisions of the British North America Act or in the Imperial copyright law, which prevents the recognition of our rights as defined in the Canadian Copyright Act, the best way is to have these measures amended. British publishers and authors may as well make up their minds now as at a later period that if they desire modifications in our law regarding copyright they must apply for it at Ottawa, not at Westminster. But the law itself, in one shape or another, must stand. In this matter Great Britain must recede; Canada will not.

It is to be regretted that Mr. Rowell has begun his Premiership under adverse circumstances. He has been ordered by his doctor to cease working and rest.

THE PENSION IS NOT ALL.

The London ADVERTISER publishes a list of Senators over 70 years of age. Seven are over 80; eight are between 75 and 80; and eleven between 70 and 75. A seat in that haven of rest for defeated politicians evidently tends to longevity, being a pension of a thousand a year is an expensive way of proving the fact.

PRISON RATHER THAN WANT.

(Can. Adv. Farmers' Sun, Patron Official Organ.) One of the indications that the times are very trying is that the Central Prison is overcrowded with convicts, and many other criminals are confined in the Provincial jails. The number of convicts in the Central Prison is now 410; more than at any previous period.

HOGS.

(Chatham Banner.) Hundreds of dressed hogs changed hands on the Chatham market this morning at $4 90 per cwt. The price in Detroit is $5, and yet the Canadian farmer is asked to believe that but for the duty of $3 per cwt., he would be robbed of his home market. If there was no tariff between the two countries, Canadian pork could today be sold at a profit in the American market.

SOME TELL-TALE FIGURES.

(Toronto News.) The imports of woolen clothing for July and August were valued at $256,000 and the customs tax on the same was nearly $92,000, or a little over 35 per cent. The Finance Minister evidently over-looked the item of woolens in reforming the tariff. On $38,405 worth of bicycles imported in July and August the Dominion Government levied a tax of $8,540. The riders who have paid a Federal tax of $25 or $30 on each wheel purchased will no doubt hasten to vote for Government candidates.

The duty on $91,000 worth of knitted goods imported in July and August amounted to over $34,000, or about 38 per cent. Evidently our tariff reform Finance Minister skipped this item also when doing the reform act a little over a year ago.

SIR JOHN THOMPSON'S WILL.

Worth About $10,000—He Died Intestate.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—In the Surrogate Court Messrs. O'Connor and Hogg, acting for Lady Thompson, have applied for letters of administration of the estate of the late John S. D. Thompson, who died intestate. The value of the estate is placed at $9,727 44. It includes life insurance to the value of $5,726, a library, household furniture and a small sum in the bank.

HE TALKED TOO LONG.

Sad Accident to a Young Man in Port Hope.

PORT HOPE, Ont., Dec. 28.—Beverly Ross, of the Niagara Falls and Queenston Electric Railway, who is spending his Christmas holidays at home here, was last night seeing a young lady friend off on the train when he remained talking till the train began to move, when he jumped off. It was dark, and as he walked forward he tripped over the bar of the switch and fell headlong. His left arm went on the rail and two wheels of the last Pullman went over it. The arm had to be amputated about two inches below the elbow.

THE MIDDLEMARCH TRAGEDY.

Inquest Resumed—No New Developments in the Case.

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 27.—Public interest in the Middlemarch tragedy is not abating. The Grange Hall, Middlemarch, was packed again today, when the inquest was resumed, many standing during the entire proceedings. The evidence adduced was not important.

Chas. E. Walter, brother-in-law of Prisoner John Hendershot, and cousin of Prisoner W. D. Walter, and himself suspected by the crown, was on the stand from 10:10 a.m. to 1:35 p.m. He gave his evidence in a hesitating, unsatisfactory way, and did not appear to remember anything very clearly as regarding essential points.

At the afternoon session Mary Lilly and Rosie Hendershot, daughters of Prisoner John Hendershot, gave unimportant evidence.

David Hendershot, father of the victim, identified one axe found in the woods as one that John Hendershot gave the officers, saying it was the missing one. The blood-stained axe found in the woods he had never seen before.

The last witness examined was Geo. Craig, Charles E. Walter's hired man. He, like his employer, made a most unsatisfactory witness, but it was manifestly a case of natural stupidity and not of guilt. The inquest at 6:15 p.m. adjourned till 10 a.m. Friday.

BURNED OUT.

THIRD FLOOR, Dec. 27.—One of the most destructive fires that has occurred in our village took place this morning, totally destroying the large and well-equipped roller flour mill belonging to Jas. Calvert. The fire spread to the house owned by the estate of the late Mr. Rose, and occupied by John Chester, and then to Barney Service's barn, both of which were destroyed. Losses: Jas. Calvert, on mill, $7,000; insurance, $5,000; Rose estate, $500; insurance, $200; Barney Service, loss $200; insurance, $100. D. Weir had over $200 bushels of flax seed in the grist mill. He loses $700.

WHEATLEY, Ont., Dec. 27.—About 6 o'clock this morning fire broke out in the residence of E. L. Merrifield, 8th concession of Mersea. Damage $1,000. The house was insured in the Queen of Montreal for $150; no insurance on the contents.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—A fire broke out in a three-story brick building, corner of Broadway and Fillmore avenue tonight and spread to and destroyed the entire block across the street, running from Fillmore avenue to Gibson street, causing a loss of $300,000. Owing to frozen hydrants it was half an hour after the arrival of the firemen before they could turn a stream on the flames.

PLUCKING UP COURAGE.

The Chinese Think the Cold Weather Will Help Them in the Japs Difficulties.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Private letters from Wei Hui Wei say that the Chinese fleet is in a hopeless condition. In their operations by land the Chinese are following the famous Russian tactics of 1912 and harassing the flanks of the first army, which is stuck in the snow.

The action of the Chinese in regard to the proposals for peace, as being made merely to gain time and let the winter play havoc with the invading forces. The progress of the Japanese troops has been arrested by the daily increasing severity of the frost.

Over 30 German officers and non-commissioned officers are drilling a new army of Chinese troops. Foreigners in the customs service who have had military experience are joining the central army and training the Chinese forces.

The Chinese are plucking up courage in view of the climatic difficulties with which the enemy has to contend.

Viceroy Chang Chi Hung is reported to be on his way back to Wu Chang in order to start the construction of the projected Grand Trunk Railway.

Churchill's Condition.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Lord Randolph Churchill passed a restless night, but his general condition is unchanged.

The Pope's Latest.

ROME, Dec. 28.—The Pope has completed the text of his encyclical in regard to the position of the church in the United States, but is still engaged in revising the manuscript.

Vancouver Terrorized.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 28.—Citizens of Vancouver are terrorized by the visit of a gang of highwaymen, burglars and firebugs, who have found their way to the city by way of the Sound. People are held up and robbed at all hours of the night. For three successive nights, under cover of a fog, the thieves have set fire to crowded wooden buildings in the business portions of the city. Prompt action by the firemen has prevented the city from being destroyed by fire as it was eight years ago.

A little colored lad walked into the ADVERTISER editorial room last evening with a letter in his hand and a parcel under his arm. He delivered the letter quite readily, but appeared loath to part with his parcel. He gazed on it admiringly once or twice, and then handed it over with heroic resignation. Investigation disclosed a good-sized piece of excellent plum pudding—a part of what remained from those Mrs. Lush, of the London Club, presented the newboys and boot-blacks with, on the occasion of their supper the night before. The letter was from Mr. Grigg, asking the acceptance of the "sample" with the newboys' and boot-blacks' compliments. The sample was pronounced A1, and was carefully placed out of reach of office rodents.

Sailing Away, both of them for pleasure, — with the chances for safety in favor of the washboard. In fact, there isn't much chance for safety until it's gone. If you don't want your clothes rubbed to pieces — throw it away. Use Pearlina. That washes without harm. The washboard wears out while it's getting things clean. It's rub and wear without Pearlina. It's hard work, too. Pearlina takes away the rubbing and the work. No use for either, it takes away the dirt easily, quickly, cheaply.
