Montreal, July 23.-Henri Beurassa, in Le Devoir, reters to the impropriety of a British minister undertaking to define the attitude of the Canadian Prime Minister on the naval question before Mr. Borden had returned to Canada and submitted his policy to Parliament and the people.

This strange proceeding had been evidently adopted with the authorization of

Mr. Pourassa says: "Till further information is received, it may be taken or granted that Mr. Borden is preparng to return to his attitude of 1909— e. to reserve for a nebulous future the efinition of the terms of Imperial partne ship and the settlement of the condion on which the political authority and he military burdens of the Empire will apportioned. In the meanwhile he is prepared to run to arms on land and ea, and to take an immediate plunge into a policy of preparation against the still problematical dangers that Britain encounter in the North Sea or the Mediterranean.

He editorially proceeds to point out that the Canadian ministers were elected to represent Canada and not the British "Further," Mr. Bourassa points out, "Mr. Borden should know that participation in Imperial naval affairs is distasteful to French-Canadians, and it he has forgotten it we have only to remind him of the vote in Drummo Arthabaska, where the by-election was fought out on the naval question. "A fresh dose of the Drummond Arthabaska medicine might have a salu tary effect," he concludes.
