Smuggling in the North. Government Agent John Flewin, of Port impson, who came down with the Indian Andrew Wright, committed for trial on a charge of house-breaking, has reported to the authorities that a large amount of smuggling is going on between Northern British Columbia and Alaskan ports. The chief offenders in this respect are Indians, who come over in their cances to work in sale among the cannery employes and fishermen. In the fall, when they go back to Alaska, the Indians take woollen goods, such as blankets, shirts, etc., which they generally succeed in getting into United States territory duty free. St. Andrew's Day, the world over wherever Scotsmen be," was celebrated right royally yesterday, but nowhere did the "brithers a" enjoy themselves more thoroughly than in Victoria, where they gathered around the festive board of mine hosts of the Driard. There it was that the St. Andrew's and Caledonian society held their annual dinner, and to say that the event was a complete and undivided success is but to use the mild and unsophisticated English for the more extravagant and expressive French, which, being translated, meaneth "they did it well."

The dinner itself was the most general and supportunity. one of the most generous and sumptuous ever served in the city.
