Whatever Mr. Gebhardt's Eele may be now, the aged son of Eolus and War Song now, the aged son of Eolus and War Song has been a good horse in his time and does not deserve the following remarks by an English correspondent: "But talking of failures, of all the lamentable break-downs, of all the absurd fiascos, it was that of "Freddie" Gebhardt's aged nag, Eole. What on earth possessed the far-famed Langtrian dude to send over such a sorry beast to compete with English racers! Why, he hadn't a chance with St. Gatien, who played with him like a cat does with a Hanlan has become an accomplished diplomatist. Wherever he goes he seems to know the right thing to say in the right place. For instance he arrived at Detroit on Sunday, and held forth as follows: "Thursday's race will be my first appearance in public in Detroit. I have always wanted to come here, and am glad at last I have made arrangements to row here against a good man. I have a new paper boat with me, built by Waters of Troy, N. Y., and Lee has a wooden boat, built by Ruddick of Boston. I shall baptize my boat the 'City of Detroit,' as this will be the first place in which she will be dipped. by Ruddick of Boston. I shall haptize my boat the 'City of Detroit,' as this will be the first place in which she will be dipped.

The course opposite the island, on the American side, is fully as good as any I have ever seen, and I expect to make fast time." It would be interesting to know in how many cities and to how many different sets of people Hanlan has said them. how many cities and to how many different sets of people Hanlan has said about the same things. The Holmans at the Cardens. The Holman opera company opened their season at Horticultural gardens last evening in Andrau's ever popular La lascotte. The pavilion was well filled with a fashionable and appreciative audience. The merits of the leading with a fashionable and appreciative audience. The merits of the leading members of the company are too well known to require any invidious distinction. It was the general remark of the audience that the "Holmans never sang better," and certainly the greeting that Miss Sallie Holman received proved that she has not lost any of her popularity. Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Holman; Mr. Dalton, and in fact all the old members, were heartily welcomed. A new and young tenor, Reginald Christian (Prince Frederick), sang very nicely; his acting was hardly demonstrative enough. No doubt, however, they will "bring him eu." Harry Rich, as the court physician, was as usual very funny, and little Laura, in her songs, was a great success. It is perhaps not too much to say that the Holmans have done mere to familiarize the people of Toronto with operatic music and to inepire them with a taste for the same than any or all other received the same than any or all other received.

"I have noticed that officers who talked like him did not deem the fare and cooking good enough for their stomachs by any means, even though they had neither work nor duty to perform: but no doubt they deem their stomachs higher toned or differently constructed from those of the base noncommissioned and baser privates, nor am I sure some of them did not at times keep themselves in sugar at the men's expense, and that, too, when the men had not half enough."

"Volunteer" showed his utter ignorance of the gentleman to whom he refers when he penned the above paragraph. As a matter of fact Col. Tyrwhitt marched every step that his men did, his horse being placed at the disposal of those who became exhausted, and what is more he messed with his men throughout the campaign, eating the same food, be it pork or hard tack. The men who returned here on Tuesday state that there never was a scarcity of food, hard tack and pork being plentiful, the latter though fat, exceedingly sweet and wholesome. The members of the York-Simcoe battalion speak in the very highest terms of Col. Tyrwhitt, and the way in which he won this esteem was by sharing the hardships of the men exactly as though he was a private in the ranks, and yet "Volunteer" says:
