over 400 are naturalized American citizens. It is harder to get a Canadian to swallow that offensive oath of specially renouncing Queen Victoria than it is the average Englishman. The true national sentiment of the Canadian young men in the States came out forcibly during the Fenian raids of 1866, when companies of them were formed to come in arms to defend Canada if need were. Their British colors were sent to Toronto as a memorial of their loyalty, and I believe are now to be seen in the Council Chamber of this city. The "commercial unionists" don't make much out of the exodus argument. It is a boomerang that knocks back on the head of its throwers. There is one point not yet founded on on the exodus question: Suppose the thing came about after a civil war, or without a war, that Canada was lost or given away to the States: thousands and tens of thousands of our best and noblest people who live here and come here because this is a British country with British laws, would leave it at once. They would follow the flag to the world's end, as did their U. E. Loyalist sires a century ago. What has taken and is taking yearly, thousands of loyal British, farmers to our Canadian Northwest, despite its severe climate, but the fact that it is a British colony, where no man is required to renounce his natural allegiance to his Queen and country and where he can live under British laws. nded to me on my recent previdential escape
Union Station.
Friends have asked me frequently to desibe the accident. When we turned the correct of the station into Simcoe-street to come with trains about on both the southerly and emiddle tracks. There was a great deal noise by reason of blowing off steam and uging of bells, but it was impossible for the boman to distinguish the engine coming up the north track. On the centre track cod the train going to Hamilton, which procted on to Sincoe-street. The driver of at train had his presence of mind out him and seeing both the cab ming north and the train backing up, he ew one long whistle to the engineer of the hor train as a signal to stop. The cabman, this time being on the centre track and ew one long whistle to the engineer of the her train as a signal to stop. The cabman, y this time being on the centre track and aring the whistle of the Hamilton engine, turally supposed the engine was going to ove and urged his horses across the track, aly to collide with the train backing up on so north track, which train the Hamilton agine was signalling to stop. The horses defront wheels of the cab had got on the ath track when the rear of the car backing struck the cab in front of where I was siting. The pole broke and let the horses cross, hich they did unhurt, though dragged along the traces. Both the front wheels and one r wheel of the cab were smashed. The cab sed on its side and Dalton was thrown on round under the cal. I was inside with ton the curtain of the cab. The wreck position was pushed gradually across street. I venture no judgment upon the question of fisancial advantage, but if the scheme should prove ever so profitable, or should not be a mineralism, or, short of that, to any very close intercommunion of our populations, I think it a duty to say that we should pay very close intercommunion of our populations, I think it a duty to say that we should pay very close intercommunion of our populations, I think it a duty to say that we should pay very close intercommunion of our moral renewn that has been conferred on rather than achieved by Toronto, we have nothing to boast of in Canada, and a wise patriotism would value the preservation of our moral status much more than the improvement of our finances. The mixed peoples of the United States, may applain and excuse much that we cannot help detesting in their social condition, but we should be careful how we do anything that would tend to establish amongst us the moral standing of the great republic.

Some Truths About the "Exedus."

Editor World: The commercial unionists represented by The Mail are very much exercised over the number of young men who go to the States, compelled to leave their Canadian homes, etc. This alleged execus is worked for all it is worth, and a good deal more, by The Mail to make a point for annexation, but it utterly fails when the truth i known, That is, our young Canadians by known. That is, our young Canadians by virtue of their general better education, sounder morals and more trustworthy character, are preferred to American young men in all business cities of the West. A young Canadian will have better charces given him than an American, better perhaps than he would have at home, where he competes with his fellow Canadians. Hence many go to Western cities and states, not to become Americans, but to make money as Canadians and come back home in time to spend it. It is as Canadians they are preferred att if the day ever came that Canada became part of the United States our young men would lose their distinction and be in no special request in Americans.

quest in American cities, would be no better than Americans.

That our young Canadians value their country and their British birthrighs is shown by a remarkable fact: There are in Chicago to day, 40,000 Canadians, 39,000 of these are French Canadians, and out of the whole number not over 400 are naturalized American citizens. It is harder to get a Canadian to swallow that

About the "Excels."

Relieve World: It is proverbially hard to please all parties, especially so is it for preachers. They are either musty mystagogues, or they bring the world into the pulpit. For this last Mr. Milligan is assailed. But the Great Exemplar screens him. He it was who sked, "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own weighing of the world as well as the soul. It is the greatest of English preachers, Dr. Liddon, if I remember well, who observes that this text touches nations as well as individuals:

Take them down to WALKER'S Store.

Let your landlord clean and burnish.
