LONDON, Sept. 21.—Mr. Labouchere continues his political warfare on the Liberal paper to-day attacks the proposal that Irish members shall sit in the English Parliament, which it is now generally admitted is one of the features of Gladstone's Home Rule Bill. ONE CENT. TRACKING LIZZIE BORDEN.

SOMEONE BEFORE THE MURDER SHE CONSULTED A LAWYER.

She Was Anxious to Learn What Would Be Her Rights at Law in the Event of Her Father's and Her Stepmother's Deaths—The Lawyer Gave Her an Opinion and the Murders Followed.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 21.—The local speaking for the prosecution in the Borden murder case, has announced that they had pretty conclusive proof that the late Andrew J. Borden intended to make a will. It implied what has appeared to be a bad break in the government's case—a positive temperance work and a will.

The defence endeavored during the preliminary hearing to disprove the published statements by putting C. C. Cook, Mr. Borden's man of business, on the stand and securing from him the testimony that the murdered man had expressed no intention of drawing up a will.

Will Give It Attention. The Government did not bother with this testimony at the hearing, but all signs fall the prosecution will give this phase of the case a great deal of attention when the trial opens.

Borden's movements for a period of six months previous to the discovery of the facts that Lizzie Borden was to Providence by way of New Bedford from this city; she consulted one of the most prominent lawyers in Providence, and after detailing the facts of her father's estate and the position which her stepmother occupied with reference to the property, asked what her rights in the estate would be in case of the death of her father or stepmother. The lawyer wanted a chance to look up the Massachusetts law, and he took her to call again. She went to Providence again by the same circuitous route on the Thursday before the murder, and was informed as to her rights in the property.

When Lizzie left the lawyer's office she purchased a trip at the Andover store and had it expressed to her home in this city. She also purchased other articles. The police have seen the bag which she had with her at the time of the murder, and it was by this piece of paper and the records on the express company's books that the police were able to trace the bag which was placed in her hands on the Thursday before the murder, and was found to contain a small amount of money.
