

THERE is living to-day in Honesdale, N.J., the only surviving witness of the trip of the first locomotive brought from England to the United States, Dr. Otis Avery, who is still practising dentistry at the age of 93.

WE never knew "cheap dentistry" that was not also dirty dentistry. One's surroundings may be all silver-plated. But the morals of the cheap advertiser cannot be even nickel-plated.

GET all you can for all you've got, and get all your patient has got for the least you can give him. That seems to be the ambition of our sensational advertisers.

THE author of "David Harum" was a son of the late Dr. Westcott, one of the pioneers of dentistry.
