have left the country? or rather is not such a supposition contrary to every probability? Let encouragement be held out, even in the most indiscrin inate manner, the persons most likely to accept the offer, will certainly be those, whose views were previously directed to emigration. Perhaps, indeed, the more opulent among the people who have taken such a resolution, will not be easily diverted from their preconcerted plans, and will be little influenced by the offer of assistance. Those who feel some difficulty in accomplishing their views, will be more ready to listen to terms, by which the attainment of their object is rendered more easy. The encouragement held out, must therefore be of such a nature as to suit those whose means are scanty. There is a chance, no doubt, that, in this way, emigration may be brought within the reach of a few, who could not otherwise have made the attempt. The effect of this, however, must be trifling; and, at any rate, the object in view deserves some sacrifice. There are individuals, perhaps, in the Highlands, who may think it better that
