CHAPTER XXVIII.
FLIGHT.

The meeting with the troops proved to be an invaluable incident. There had been a tense moment when the question whether Bremenhof would attempt treachery still hung in the balance. A moment more thrilling than any I had ever known in my life.

With his lance and crozier submission, however, a change seemed to come in everything. That I could compel him to cross the city in broad daylight when under the eyes of his police and soldiers was swarming everywhere, and so frighten him as to prevent him raising an alarm, had seemed in anticipation little more than the merest forlorn hope.

But when at the first test he had yielded abjectly, my confidence was so strengthened, and my domination over him so confirmed, that the thing became almost simple and commonplace.

We passed many evidences of the popular unrest. But Ladislav had apparently given the driver very shrewd instructions as to his route, for not once did we drive through a street where any actual disturbance was in progress.

More than once we saw conflicts going on between the troops or police and the mob. But always from a safe distance. More than once, too, we passed where trouble had broken out. Wrecked houses and workshops told of the anger of the people, and grim patches of bloodstained snow testified that the troops were not in the city for nothing.

Here and there we passed strikers whose limping walk, bandaged limbs, or bleeding faces bore evidence of recent fighting; and we drove rapidly past more than one small group gathered pale-faced and sorrowful about a figure stretched at length on the snow. These things told their own tale.

Twice Bremenhof was recognized, and howls and shouts and bitter curses were hurled at us. Once we were followed, stones were thrown, and even a couple of shots fired after us; but the swiftness of our horses quickly carried us out of danger. I could not help speculating what the crowd would have said and done had they known the mission on which we were bent, and the grim notes which had brought us two together upon that strange ride.

We reached his house in safety, and as the driver raised up his pasturing horses I braced myself for the final trial of nerves.

"Remember my oath," I whispered, as together we mounted the steps side by side. My fear was that as soon as he found himself once more in the midst of his men, his courage would return sufficiently for him to at least put up some show of fight.

Had he done so, he must have beaten me. Despite my oath and all my fiercely spoken threats, I had no intention of shooting him. It was all just bluff on my part; but I had acted well enough to prevent his having any suspicion of this. He was convinced that I was in grim, deadly earnest, and that his life hung on a thread, and he was poltroon enough to buy it at any cost.

Then I saw trouble. Some distance up the street a patrol of mounted police was riding toward us at the walk, and in an instant I perceived the danger this spell for me.

So did Bremenhof. The sight seemed to rouse his long dormant courage. He pushed me away from him, jumped back, and called in a loud ringing tone for help. The police came running out from his house, the patrol picked up their horses, and as I sprang into the sleigh, the street seemed suddenly alive with men.

My driver knew his business, however. The horses he had were spirited and full of skill, and in a moment we were rattling along at full speed, the bells ringing and jingling furiously, the driver shouting lusty warnings, and the sleigh jumping and jolting so that I had to grip tight to save myself from being thrown out.

The patrol pulled up to speak with Bremenhof, and as we dashed round a corner, I saw him mount one of the horses and come dashing after us, leading the rest in hot pursuit.

But we had a good start by that time, and my driver, guiding his team with rare skill and judgment, made a dozen quick turns through short streets. This prevented our pursuers from spurring their animals to the full, kept them in doubt as to the direction we had taken, and thus minimized their advantage of saddle over harness.

To that manoeuvre was due our success in evading immediate capture. Doubt of ultimate success in such a chase, however, I proposed to the driver to pull up and let me get away on foot.

"The Count is close here," he replied, to my great surprise; and after we had raced along in this fashion for some ten minutes, I saw Volna and Ladislav waiting at a corner. The driver pulled up, and they jumped in.

"Sergius was to look for us here," said Ladislav, in explanation. "What has happened?" I told him briefly as we continued the flight.

"We shall get away," he said confidently. "Sergius knows his work. He has not equal in Warsaw," and it looked at that moment as though his confidence was well grounded.

Volna was very calm, but the glances she kept casting behind bore witness to her anxiety.

"I hope you are right," I replied to Ladislav; "but you should not have come."

TORTURING SKIN DISEASE
 Afflicted this bright little girl

Mrs. F. Miners, of 311 Suffolk Street, Guelph, Ont., says: "A year since, while living in Oshawa, Ont., my little daughter Lorinda, six years of age, contracted a skin disease on the upper part of her body. This first broke out like tiny water blisters, afterwards taking the form of dry scabs. These would disappear for a short time and then reappear worse than ever. The clothes coming in contact with the skin set up such a severe irritation that it was impossible to keep her from scratching. We tried various preparations and healing lotions yet obtained no good results until we began using Zam-Buk. With each application the irritation and soreness was greatly relieved, and the child rested easier. Thro' continued using, the eruptions and scabs fast disappeared and in a short space of time the skin was completely cleared from the disease. It is now some months since we used Zam-Buk, and there being no sign of any more eruptions breaking out on her body, we believe Zam-Buk has worked a complete cure."

"Keep Zam-Buk handy in a sound home motto. Daily mishaps make Zam-Buk a daily need, and to treat one's skin troubles with this pure healing balm means speedy relief from smarting pain as well as from itching and inflammation."

What Majority Will Woods and Slipp Have in Queens County?

We are laying plans for the opening of our warehouse in St. John, where we will be in a position to give the very best value and lowest prices possible to obtain first grade Carriages, Harness, Horse-furnishings, etc., for.

We are taking Queens county first, and from that will radiate through the entire province, taking advantage of local events as they arise to excite enthusiasm.

We are not politicians, but from our reports feel the county of Queens is going to make a change in its representation, and we have decided to offer the following premiums to those who guess "Queens Co. guess." As the competition goes on, the paper will announce the smallest and largest amounts of correct guesses, withholding the names.

The contest will close at 2 o'clock p. m. election day (March 8) and no estimate received after that hour will be considered. "Avaris will be made by the Advertising Manager of The Times, as soon as possible after declaration to save any error in a possible recount, and cheques will be mailed lucky individuals by us at once.

SALVATIONISTS' PASS THROUGH ST. JOHN TO THEIR NEW HOMES

Salvation Army Special Immigrant Train Went Through Yesterday.

An undertaking unique in the annals of Canadian transportation is being achieved in the handling of 300 immigrants who came to Halifax on the steamer Kensington under the auspices of the Salvation Army and passed through here early yesterday morning on their way to British Columbia. The immigrant train consisted of ten colonel cars and a baggage porter, Col. Howell said the passengers were a fine lot. He said that a position was waiting for every one. The system of the army was to book immigrants for vacant places rather than bring out the settlers to do for themselves. Col. Howell said that at least 10,000 would be brought over this spring, and as many more positions could be found for. These steamers—the Kensington, Southwark and Ionian—had been chartered and in all would make nine trips, besides which there would be many special parties on different steamers.

The next party for British Columbia will leave Glasgow on March 28 and a party for the maritime provinces will leave on March 26.

Of the 10,000 or more coming this year, probably 2,000, he said, would settle in the maritime provinces and the rest would be distributed over Ontario and British Columbia. About five per cent were members of the Salvation Army, Col. Howell said, and the rest belonged to many different denominations.

Many in St. John are pleased to address Col. Howell by his new title. When chancellor of the Salvation Army here a few years ago he was Major Howell, soon afterwards he was promoted to the rank of brigadier and in December last was made lieutenant-colonel.

COMPLAIN OF DELAY
 Passengers on Allan Liner Grampan Complain of Delay in Handling Baggage at Sand Point.

That two and a half hours is too long for the handling and inspection of baggage at this port is the opinion of two prominent merchants of Winnipeg who landed from the Allan liner Grampan at Sand Point yesterday morning. They are Geo. Merrick and Geo. Smart, of Merrick, Anderson & Co., a big Winnipeg hardware house.

Heretofore on returning after a trip to the old country they were always landed at Halifax and Mr. Smart is emphatic in stating that it will be his last trip to this port for the reason given.

They say they had to wait from 9.30, when the Grampan docked, till 12 o'clock before their baggage was examined. They claim there is entirely too much handling. "In Halifax," said Mr. Smart, "the baggage is inspected in the dock at once and I have never had to wait longer than an hour. Here it is moved first to the dock then from one shed to another, while the passengers stand about shivering."

THE ALL-RED PLAN IN GREAT BRITAIN
 It is Decidedly a Live Issue Just Now—Canadian Elections May Hurry It.

Montreal, March 2.—The Star's London correspondent cables: Now that Winston Churchill has returned from East Africa, the ministerial sub-committee, of which Mr. Lloyd George is also a member, is further considering the all-red project. It is said that Mr. Churchill himself strongly favors the scheme, which includes an Irish port, as of course, does Mr. Burrell. On the other hand, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and Lord Strathcona are on record as believing that nothing of a running commentary on the picture as they were thrown upon the screen, was very interesting.

Rev. Mr. Higgins is now connected with the foreign mission board here, but was for a number of years stationed as a missionary in India. Much, therefore, of what he told the people was the result of his own observation. As dealing with the present state of India, the lecture was a revelation to most of those present.

V. G. R. Vickers, of Montreal, was at the Royal yesterday.
