Intemperance.—What strange infatuation is it that terspis men to drink alcoholick liquors, when facts, and reason, and nature and religion, are continually warning them of the inevitable train of disasters and evils consequent thereon! When our senses warn us of the immediate danger of a precipice close at hand, have we not prudence to avoid it, clinging to life as we do with a cowardly tenacity? And when physicians demonstrate to us the poisonous, deadly influence of ardent spirits upon the system, and all experience illustrates thruth, why have not men sense and consistency enough to forsake the miserably foolish indulgence of drinking the poison. No rational man, who could once feel sensible of the delights of temperance, would, unless by an infatuation as gross as instanty, ever be tempted into its opposite. And no individual who can in truth profess to be virtue one or patriotick, can consistently with that profession, ever give countenance to intemperance in othere, by the contagious influence of his own example.—Family Magazine.

Franklin was an observing and sensible man, and his conclusions were seldom incorrect. He said, a newspaper and a bible in every house, a good school in every district, all studied and appreciated as they ment, are the principal supporters of virtue, morally, and crull liberty.

CHOCK FUL.—A man who married a particularly plump specimen of womankind, being a bit of a weg, told her one day that she filled the measure of his naturmonial joys full; for she was beautiful, duttial, youthful, cheerfol, plentiful, and an armfull.

Wisdom.—The chief properties of wisdom are to be mindful of things past, careful of things present, and provident of things past, careful of things present, and provident of things past, careful of things present, and provident of things as to come.

Steep is doath's younger brother, and so like him that I never trust him without my prayers.—Sir T. Brown.

SEARS' NEW AND COMPLETE HISORY
OF THE BIBLE.

From the Southern Quarterly Review for Orber.
We hail the appearance of this work as an apicious event in the history of Biblical Literature. It is a excellent work,—excellent in style, rich in material, ecant in exterior, and not only correct, but exceedingly finating in its contents. We have read it—almost every e most read it,—with a deep and kindling interest, equaco the tinspired by high-wrought works of fiction. It is naintended solely for scholars—a select few—but for wholpmasser. It addresses itself to the great heart of humanity and istouching records of past events,—events of the deast importance—find a tarilling response in the brea of the classes of men, high and low, rich and poor, learnt and literate, young and old. The most faisthious us of the most captions erine, can find nothing in its pages which to cavit. We have been surprised to find, in so iluminous a work, such uniform purity, becauty, simplieit and almost perfection of style, running throughout the whe, and importing grace and attraction to every narrati. The highest recommendation of this noble work, hover, remaining grace and attraction to every narrating grace and attraction at the state of the contraction of the cartistic of the Christian Faith. SEARS' WONDERS OF THE WORLD,
In Nature, Art, and Mind.

This is decidedly one of the most beautiful and intresing volumes, for Young Prople especially, ever must from the American Press. We should like to give our readers a few extracts from it, with one or two of the most beautiful and ellustrates and value—one that will like and prove useful in the family circle, then the ephemeral trash of the day has passed away and is forgotten—to purchase these "Wonders." One of the Revisers of this work, in a late New-York Paper, apprtyriately remarks: "The Ancients boasted of the Sey's Wonders." Photologically the provided and illustrated, and put up in rehly ornamented bindings, highly adapting them as splendid presents for young people.

Teach of the above works is leautifully printed and illustrated, and put up in rehly ornamented bindings, highly adapting them as splendid presents for young people.
