IT ALMOST GOT TO BE A HABIT

The twenty-fourth of May usually marks the general opening of several early-summer activities, including principally baseball schedules, fishing trips, suburban residences visits, and extemporaneous duckings. It is seldom, however, that the day will see a duplication of any of these, but—

It was a merry party of young people who arrived at Millerville early in the morning on their way to spend the holiday on the Kennebecasis. They were loaded down with wraps, cameras and numerous parcels of varied shapes which suggested toothsome morsels inside.

One young chap with several coats over his arm, a camera in his hand, and under the other arm three or four packages the contents of which had occasioned considerable brow-puckering and apprehension on the part of a similar number of "sweet young things" in the home kitchen the day before, was proceeding jauntily down Millerville boat landing. He had about reached the waiting boat when a combination of circumstances hurried him on his way. Placing his heel carelessly on a spot where the tide has deposited an unusual amount of mud, he executed the unhygienic figure of the Argentine tango in a manner which would make Olga Petrova assume a paddy green hue. By a remarkable physical contortion he managed to land the coats and camera and the other arm three or four packages the contents of which had occasioned considerable brow-puckering and apprehension on the part of a similar number of "sweet young things" in the home kitchen the day before, was proceeding jauntily down Millerville boat landing.
