H. M. S. Sparrowhawk Returns After an Unsuccessful Search for the Privateer.

H. M. S. Pheasant Also Scours the Waters of the North Without Avail.

With the tops of her four stumpy funnels badly discolored by heavy steaming, and with decks covered with grime and seot, H.M. torpedo destroyer Sparrowhawk returned to the buoy in Esquimalt harbor this afternoon.

The little tank of machinery and pent up throbs of steam left here about two weeks ago under sealed orders from Admiral Palliser, which at the time of her departure were thought to be commands to cruise the waters of the north in search of the "long, low, deep, rakish craft" of the corsair who was thought to be laying in wait for the treasure laden steamers from the mouth of the Yukon. The presumption was right, for on opening his orders as soon as the Sparrowhawk stood out to sea, her commander found that he was on a privateer hunt in co-operation with H.M.S. Pheasant, which left Esquimalt shortly Pheasant, which left Esquimar shorty before the torpedo boat destroyer. The Sparrowhawk proceeded north under the slow bell, exploring all the channels and inlets in which the pirates, should they exist, in fact, could hide. Arrived at Metlakatla, she was to await the report that the report which was scenting the of the warship which was scouring the waters contiguous to the Queen Charlotte Islands. The Pheasant made the lotte Islands. The Pheasant made the complete circuit of the islands, investigating in different passages, but not even a glimpse of the vessel thought to be flying the yellow and red flag was had; in fact no vessels, saving a few small siwash steamers, skiffs and war converse which were not searched for letcanoes, which were not searched for let-ters of marque, were seen. After reters of marque, were seen. After re-porting to the Sparrowhawk the nonporting to the Sparrowhawk the non-success of her search the Amphion continued her voyage north to Behring eta, where in company with the Icarus, which vessel went straight to the sea, she will act as patrol vessels.

During her voyage the Sparrowhawk covered a considerable distance, and, according to some of those on board, she had several sudden runs in pursuit of vessels which hove in sight. In all cases, however, the shipping seen were plainly most ordinary craft engaged in the pursuits of peace and none were boarded.

Mr. C. B. Bush, president of the Gilmer county court, tells briefly his experience with an epidemic of bloody flux in his family. He writes under date of October 8, 1896, at Auburn, W. Va.: "During the past summer we had three cases of bloody flux in our family which we caused in less than one week with cases of bloody flux in our family which we cured in less than one week with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. PUZZLED CHARITY. 'A Case Which Presents Some Interesting Features.

An announcement that His Worship the Mayor had granted to an American lady in the city without funds and an xious to visit her sick brother, permission "to play on the streets," as an appeal to charitably disposed persons to contribute to her needs, prompted a Times reporter this morning to make some inquiries. He learned that the lady referred to had applied to His Worship for that permission, and for nothing more, and although Mayor Rednothing more, and although Mayor Red-fern shares the opinion that street musicians appealing for charity are but mendicants, and consequently a nui-tory but mendicants, and consequently a nui-tory but mendicants and consequently and mendicants are not of the second sance, he deemed it wise to grant such permission for two eevnings.

Further inquiry resulted in the information that the lady is from San Franisco and arrived here without funds a few days ago. Asked why she did not seeme the necessary money for her Eastern journey in San Francisco, the lady had apparently no answer to make, her only explanation, and that is no explanation at all, being that she came to Victoria because it is possible to se cure a cheaper fare from here to the East than from California.

Mayor Redfern, in answer to a suggestion that some more worthy method of assisting one in distress might be found than allowing one to play on the public streets and solicit money from the passersby, said that it was manifestly passersby, said that it was maintestly unfair to expect the city to provide financial assistance for residents of other cities whenever they might come here and ask for it. United States Consul Smith has not been appealed to by the lady in distress, and says had he been he would gladly render assistance without compelling her to resort to the methods referred to, and doubtless many charitably disposed citizens would be glad to contribute something towards esisting the lady on her way. But unless such a case is presented in some more regular way than by appealing in the manner of a street mendicant, the unfortunate individual is liable to stret mendicancy being a nuisance stret mendicancy being a nuisance which all would like to see done away This seems a fitting case for the well disposed to enquire into and take up.

It is probable that there has not been a time in the history of this city for many years when the corporation was as free from the indigent class as at the present time. THE CIVIC DEADLOCK.

Resume of the Circumstances Leading up to the Present Crisis.

As the present situation in the council has awakened widespread interest throughout the city, and as a large number are ignorant of the immediate causes of the unfortunate friction between a majority of the council on one side and the Mayor and the remainder of the council on the other, a brief explanation will be timely. The history of the circumstances which led up to the present crisis has to be considered in order to properly appreciate the situation. After the defeat of the $15,000 by-law submitted to the people for the purpose of completing the reservoir at Beaver Lake to receive the filtered water, a motion was made in the council ordering that the water mains be connected with the reservoir in its present state, without concreting the sides, the estimated cost of making such connection, $1,500, to be taken work. The city engineer gave it as his opinion that this would lead to the softening of the earth walls of the reservoir, and cause them to slide down, thus discoloring and ruining the water.

This cripion that this would lead to the has thirteen men at work on the trail to facilitate the passage of the troops' supplies.

The mayor in vetoing the pro-position based his action on the power city's property, and also urging that to take $1,500 from the street appropriation for making connections with the respective would unduly cripple the fund.

In the report last Tuesday night the street committee embodied a recommendation that the work be deferred for a year. The mayor thereupon refused to allow the report to be submitted without alteration. His contention was that the motion to award the contract being passed by the council, and the committee having been instructed to give it to the two lowest tenderers, the committee were exceeding their functions in reopening a subject with which they have no power to deal. In order to al-low the appropriation for the street expenditure to go through, the street committee finally withdrew the objectionable clause, Ald. Bragg having pre-viously made an ineffectual effort to introduce a motion to reconsider the mat-ter. This was ruled out of order, as a notice of motion to reconsider has to be posted twenty-four hours previous to the meeting of the council at which it is to The present situation is an awkward one. The street committee refuse to award the contract, and being supportaward the contract, and being supported by a majority, they were able on Tuesday night to carry a motion to adjourn over one by Ald. Macgregor to ballot for the awarding of the contract in question. On the other hand, the mayor will not receive the committee's report and as the reconsideration tee's report, and as the reconsideration of any action of the council must be taken up at the first subsequent meeting, which in this case has already passed, the committee are checkmated. The outcome will be awaited with interest

A RICH QUARTZ LEDGE. Two Miners Took Out Six Thousand Dollars From Rotten Quartz In a Few Days.

In another letter from the San Francisco Call's Juneau correspondent, received by the steamer Cottage City last evening, the following is given:

"There is considerable sensation along the coast of Southeastern Alaska over the find of a ledge of half decomposed quartz, richer than anything that has ever been discovered, and almost too rich to receive the credit of anyone who does not know the possibilities of Alas-kan quartz. Several Klondikers on the last north-bound steamship, City of To reka, heard about the find when the ship reached Ketchekan, and left the

"Joseph Homblet, a half-breed prospector, found the ledge which he says is located in Thorn Arm. He says he found half gold in the quartz taken from almost the top of the ground. A man named A. Cramer a California prospectng to the Cottage City's officers they brought about $100,000. A number of the miners came out by the Dalton trail the rock was heavy with leaf gold, and so rotten that they pounded out about $6,000 in free gold. The rock blown out by the shot was sorted and it filled six sacks. These sacks were cached near the claim, and taking a box full of the richest ore, studded and glittering with gold, the two men returned to Ketchikan. This rock was exhibited on the wharf whenever a steamer came in, but no sale of the claim was made, because, it is said, Homblet and Cramer wanted a fabulous price for it and could not agree between themselves as to the division of the money. Several weeks later they returned to the claim and found that the six sacks of rock had been stolen. "The first really authentic news of the discovery comes from as far away as Sitka. Homblet is a fairly well edu-cated half-breed, and has been paying his attention to Mrs. Paul, a widow, who is a matron in the Presbyterian mission at Sitka, and he wrote her the full particulars of the discovery, stating that he wanted to sell but was having trouble in doing so. Mrs. Paul consulted with Prof. Kelly, superintendent of the mission, and then wrote to Humblet to come to Sitka for a consultation ,nad bring Cramer. They went and Super-intendent Kelly interested himself in the scovery. He employed a Sitka mining xpert to visit the claim, and Humblet ramer and the expert went on the Cottage City to Ketchekan. The rock will average about $46,000 to the ton, and some of the lumps of gold are sixtenths of an inch thick and as large as a man's thumb nail. Cramer says there s plenty of the rock, and if the average lds up the mine will prove the richest in Alaska-if not in the world.'

The premises still unconnected with the sewers still follow the primitive and danger ous usage long since abandoned in every city with any pretensions to progressive-ness. With those gentlemen who, in the city council, have strongly raised their voices in advocacy of compulsory sauitation, who wish the council to be empower ed to order every house owner in Victoria to connect his premises with the sewers immediately, every person who realizes the value of modern sanitation will be fully in sympathy. On the beach at Dallas road two large sewers discharge their contents, and since the advent of the present warm spell the odors arising from these portions of the shore have been most offensive. In other seaside cities those pipes are carried well out into the channel, often more than a hundred feet beyond the lowest water mark. By this provision the foul matter conveyed through those pipes is disposed 'or in a safe and thoroughly effective manner and a grave menace to public health is removed.
