Disorderly Crowd. Last night one of the most disorderly crowds that any one would wish to see gathered around King's Square and in front of the Lyceum. Had it not been for the services of two or three policemen and Mr. Bernard Murray, the special policeman of the Lyceum, there would have been a great deal more noise and rowdyism than there were. The crowd first commenced annoying and worrying a drunken man and fighting amongst themselves. After this, when the Masonic bodies had entered the Lyceum, they crowded round the door, and filled up the alley through which the orchestra stalls are entered. From this place they were turned out by Mr. Murray. They retired to the opposite side of the street, and indulged in the playful amusement of firing stones, using Mr. Murray as a target. This did very well until one, a little bolder than the rest, whose name was William Lohn Fox. Went into the centre of the first commenced annoving and worrving John Fox, went into the centre of the

with impunity. A Monstrosity. One of the most curious and wonderful animals ever seen is now on exhibition at Hamm's livery stables, Charlotte street: It was born in Nova Scotia, which seems to be a home for wonderful developments of the animal creation. The animal stands about three feet high, and girths stands about three feet high, and girths about four feet and some inches. The front part is perfect ox and the hind part is half ox and half horse, having a double is half ox and half horse, having a double the jurisdiction of the Canadian Parliais half ox and half horse, having a double set of hips, one the same as a horse; the hind legs are also those of a horse, and it is the proud owner of two tails, one of an ox and the other clothed with the hair of a horse. This animal, which is one year old and in a sound and healthy condition, is certainly one of the greatest freaks of nacetainly one of the grea ture ever seen.
