JANUARY

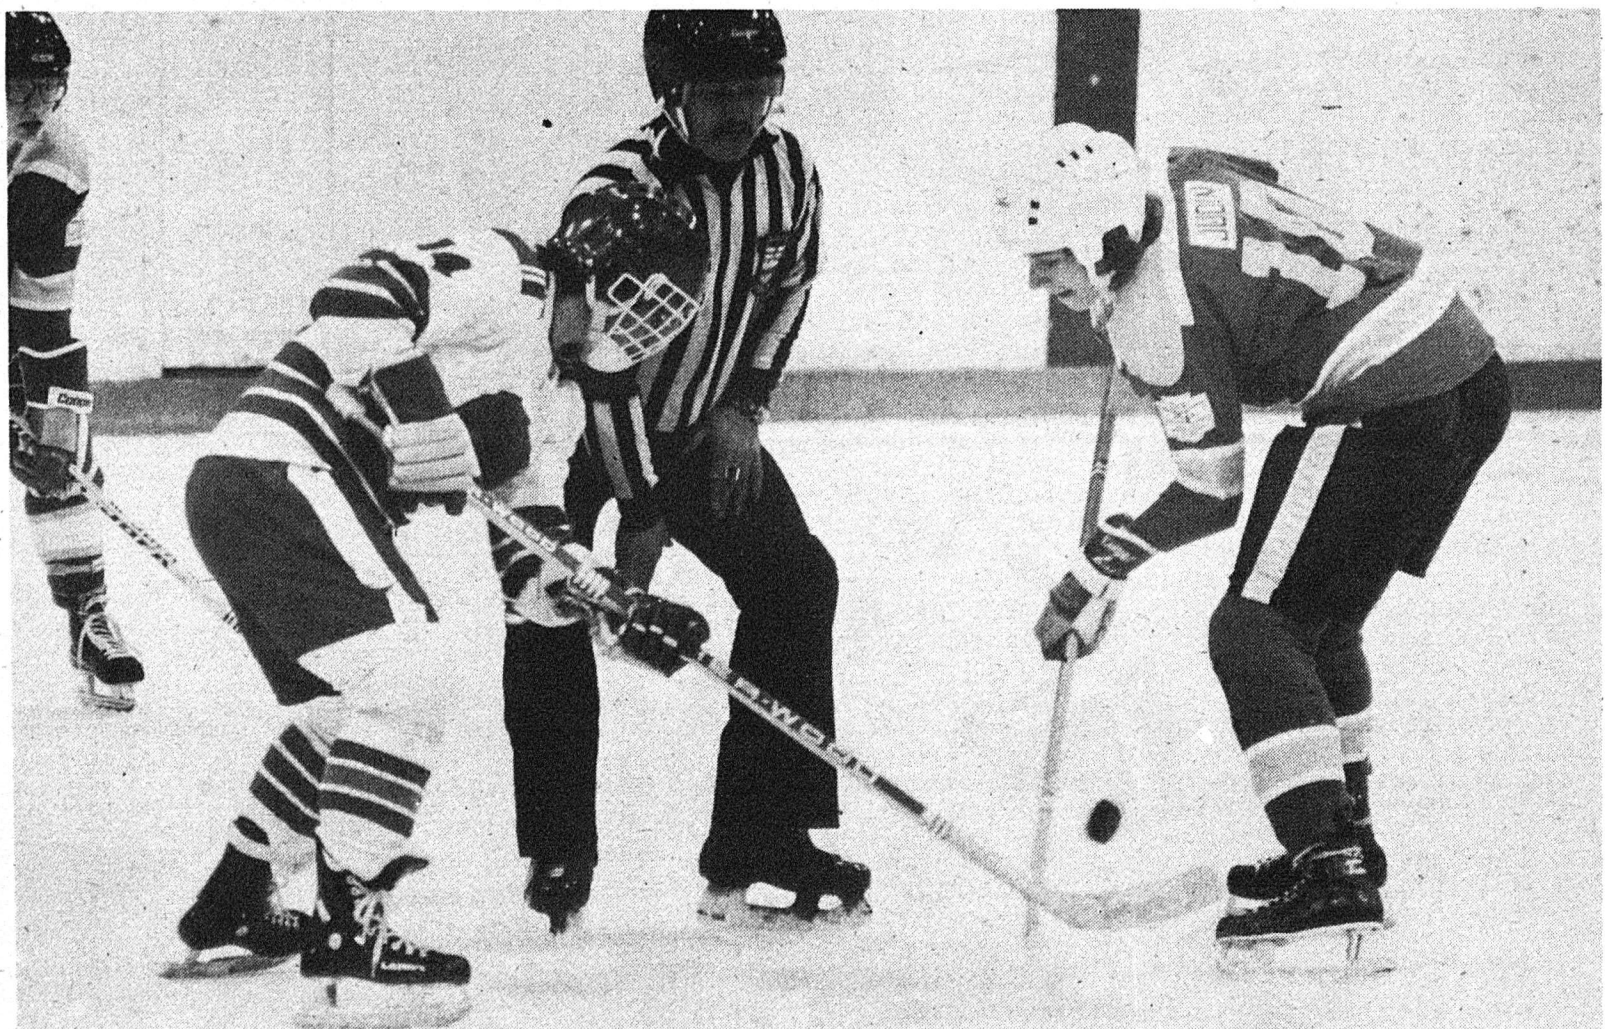

by Loreen Lennon

January, as always, was marked by increasing campus news, an indication the university community was settling into the business of the year.

The month's action included: the release of the Grantham Task Force Report on student financing; appointment of Myer Horowitz as the university's ninth president, beginning July 1; a proposal from the Department of Housing and Food Services that student government in Lister Hall be severely limited, and the subsequent Ah, the bliss of being a well-hung med student.

U of A girls added a new twist to the campus' favorite sport: hockey. And they knew how to win too.
