

TO

FREDERICK JACKSON TURNER

who long has led the van of research in the history of the great Middle West, and has done most to make known its importance in the development of the American nation, this contribution to its early history is dedicated by one of his former students.