TRACED BY A VALENITUE *****

Her cheeks were flushed-her eyes sparkling. She looked indescribably

"Where are Edgar and Charles?" she asked, glancing round. "Here!" said a man's voice—very soft and musical—just outside the

It opened and two young men in evening dress came forward, the fore-most, who had been the speaker, step-ping up to Madeline and kissing her frankly on the cheek.

He was very handsome, in a dark, Spanish style, with an olive skin, very brilliant eyes, a heavy moustache and glossy hair of raven blackness.

His figure, too, was remarkably fine -tall, and of splendid proportions. He looked haughty, Marjorie thought, but clever, and not ill-na-

His companion was younger, and by no means so striking-looking, but Marjorie liked his face better. He was perfectly clean-shaven, and had a clear, healthy skin, such as one often sees in young Englishmen who spend a deal of their time in the country in the open air.

His gray eye was very bright and keen, his mouth was pleasant, his teeth were white and eyen.

His whole appearance was unmistakably that of a gentleman.

Not quite so tall as his brother, he was yet of a good height, and possessed, moreover, that air of alertness and agility which is a sign of perfect

Marjorie was introduced in dua

She then learned that the dark gentleman was Mr. Edgar Hyde, and that the fairer one's name was Charles.

Both looked at the dainty face of Marjorie with as much interest as was consistent with good breeding.

They greeted her with great court-esy, and Charles took her in to din-Madeline laughingly taking an arm of her father and her cousin Ed-

During the evening Marjorie, whose perceptions were very keen, made discovery. Madeline loved her cousin Edgar loved him with that all-absorbing, pas-sionate devotion which one would naturally expect in a girl of her type.

Whether he returned her love, Mar Jorie could not be quite so sure. There was evidently some kind of an anderstanding between them.

As, on their entrance he kissed her, while his brother was content with a simple hand-shake, so, during the whole evening, his manner to her was lover-like; his place, of right, seemed Nevertheless, Marjorie could not be quite sure he loved her, and once or twice she detected a jealous, dissatisfied look in Madeline's eye, as it rested on him.

Mr. Charles Hyde took his place beside Marjorie, and seemed well con-tent to stay there; nor was she illpleased to have him, for he was a pleasant, entertaining companion, and had read most of her favorite poets and authors.

She found it quite delightful to converse with him. Among other things he told her some capital stories of his adventures at Oxford.

His brother, who chanced to standing near, caught a word or two "What's that you're telling Miss St.

Clair, Charlie?"
"Oh, only a little tale about a scrape f got into at Christ church."

This answer seemed to amuse the elder brother exceedingly.

It was with difficulty he kept from aughing outright; and when he rejoined Madeline he repeated it to her, as though it were an excellent jest.

She, however, did not smile. On the contrary, a rather uneasy and anxious look crossed her face as she glanced at Marjorie.

Late in the evening Mr. Hyde asked for some music "You play, Marjorie?" said Madeline.

and the suggestion was so warmly sec-anded by all three gentlemen that Mar-jorie could not but comply. "I wonder if you can play my favor-fte," said Mr. Hyde, "What is it, sir?"

He rose, and placed a piece of music in front of her. It was Mendelssohn'e "Hear My Prayer."

"You wish me to sing as well as

Marjorie's skill as a musician was far beyond the average, and her voice was exquisite—so sweet, so rich, so As the beautiful strains ran through the room, everyone present was ex-tranced.

Mr.Hyde seemed deeply moved.

Mr.Hyde seemed deeply moved.

Mr.Jorie, turning round, saw him rais his handkerchief to his eyes.

"Miss St. Clair, your voice is diwine!" raclaimed Edgar Hyde, with enthusiass.

And both Charles and Madeline schoed the sentiment.

The man on the stage who does the trick of escaping from firmly tied ropes, submits to the bonds with a smile. He knows he can get out of the ropes that are being knotted. Put the same man in the woods and let Indian captors bind him to a tree for torture and he would struggle to the last against the bonds.

When the stomach is diseased there are bonds being woven every hour about the organs dependent on the stomach—heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc. The folly of mankind is to passively submit to the fastening of these bonds with no effort to escape until the pain they cause arouses fear.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, liver, lungs, kidneys and other organs, when these diseases, as is often the case, have their origin in the diseased stomach.

"For a long time Lyng effective control of the case, have their origin in the diseased stomach."

origin in the diseased stomach.

"For a long time I was suffering and was hardly able to get about," writes Mr. Andrew J. Jennings. of Thomas, Tucker Co., W. Va., Box. 194. "Was bothered with kidney trouble and my whole system was out of order; had no appetite. A friend of miscovery. I did so, and the first bottle restored my appetite. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the some of the 'Pleasant Pellets' and feel like a new person." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from in

Mr. Hyde laid his hand in fatherly fashion on the head of the young playar as she saill sat at the planoforte. "You have given me a great please re," he said in a slighty faltering roice, but very earnestly. "God oleas you, my dear."

CHAPTER IV.

The Locket. The next day passed pleasantly in sompany with the young men, who would spend, Madeline said, at least week or two at Denelands. There had been a hard frost for two or three days and the ice on the lake was quite strong enough to bear.

Madeline and Marjorie, attended by the two young men, went to make Mr. Hyde, though declining to put on skates, stood on the bank and watched skates, stood on the bank and watched them for some time.

"You might invite, a few of your young friends, and make a stating-party of it," he suggestes to his daughter. "Sir Edward Mortimer and his world be sted to some I think: sisters would be glad to come, I think; and perhaps the Olivers. What do you

At the mention of Sir Edward Mortimer, the two young men exchanged glances, and seemed exceedingly Marjorie saw their amusement and wondered what caused it.

That, too, she was soon to under-

"Skating by torchlight would be fine tun," said Charles Hyde. "How would St. Valentine's Day do for it,

His brother muttered a word of disent under his breath.
He looked angry and disturbed.
His uncle gazed at him intently for a moment of two then said in a slow,

"You don't like St. Valentine's Day, my boy?"

"No sir-do you?" demanded Edgar, turning suddenly upon him, and speaking with almost fierce abruptness, then suddenly turning away, and skat-g quite to the other end of the pool. Marjorie paid less attention to these fittle incidents than she might have done had not her mind been almost wholly engrossed by something elsethat something else being neither more or less than the marmer of Mr. Charles Hyde towards herself. All day long he has scarcely left her side; when he did so, it was with reluctance, and he returned as soon as he could. Marjorie's heart beat high as she no-liced this, beat high with pleasure, for, short as had been her acquaintance with this young man, she was already beginning to like him more than was well for her peace of mind.

One of A. Q. Scammon's excellent companies will be the attraction at the Grand on Saturday night, Oct. 10th, presenting the cyclone of fun "Side Tracked." There are more realistic situations in the play of "Side Tracked" than perhaps any "Side Tracked." There are more realistic situations in the play of "Side Tracked" than perhaps any other show of its class on the road, while the ludicrous comedy situations cannot fail but to smuse all. The entertainment abounds in catchy music, good specialties, pretty girls and amusing situations. There is not a dull moment from start to finish.

Miss Sadie Martinot, who stands in the forefront of actresses famous for depicting such parts as the Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith, Camille, Sapho and Countess Zicka, will soon appear here in A. W. Pinero's lengrossing study of the social problem whether a woman who has erred can, or should be allowed to tregain her status in society as set forth in his brilliant play, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Miss Martinot's performance of Paula Tanqueray is said to be an artistic and impressive one. Her supporting company is excellent. Date for Chatham Tuesday, Oct. 27. Miss Sadie Martinot, who stands

To the long list of parts in which Miss Kathryn Kidder has achieved distinction she has this season added another, the title role in "Lady Calmore's Flirtations," a play written especially for her, and which gives promise of proving as famous at her hands as did "Madame Sans Gene." The new play affords her, it is said, a field for the display of her rich dramatic gifts that cannot fail to be welcome to all admirers of the versatile art of this favorite actress. Miss Kidder and the excellent supporting company which Manager Jules Murry has secured for her will be seen here soon in this successful production. soon in this successful production. SENATOR LANDERKIN.

Died Yesterday at the Family Residence in Hanover.

Hanever, Oct. 5.-Senator Landerin is dead. To thousands throughout Ontario who knew Dr. Landerkin as one of the wittiest and most geneal men in public life the news will come as a great shock. On the temporary adjournment of the Senate four weeks ago he came home to Hanover and went to bed, complaining of a headwent to bed, complaining of a headache. No one at first thought he was seriously ill, but he gradually sank into a semi-comatose condition. Brain trouble seemed near, judging from the symptoms, but he rallied rapidly and seemed to shake off the attack. On Friday, however, the stupor returned, and this afternoon about 1.30 p.m. the Senand Sunday about 1.30 p.m. the SenFort William, Oct. 5.—The, storm perienced in years. There was heavy lightning and thurder all afternoon and a terrible gale at night.

The late Hon. Dr. Landerkin is the sixteenth Senator who has gone over to the great majority during the present Parliament. The others were:—Senators G. W. Allan, J. Armand, A. T. Wood, James W. Carmichael, Francis Clemow, M. W. Cochrane, A. M. Dechenes, R. B. Dickey, A. H. Gillmor, L. McCallum, James O'Brien, John O'Donghoe, Clarence Primrose, Samuel Prowse and Paquet. Of the above six Hon. Messrs. Carmichael, Cochrane, Dickey, Gillmor, O'Brien and Landerkin, have died during the present session. With Senator Landerkin's demise there are now four vacancies in the upper House. The seats unfilled are those of the late Senators Primrose, Cochrane and Dickey.

STORM AT FORT WILLIAM.

C. P. R. Coal Bridge Wrecked, Caus ing a Loss of $30,000. Fort William, Oct. 5.-The storm

here Saturday was the severest experi-enced in years. There was heavy enced in years. There was heavy lightning and thunder all afternoon and a terrible gale at night.

One of the large steel bridges of the Canadian Pacific's new coal handling plant was blown from its tracks and wrecked, with a large portion of the plant. Steel girders and structural bridge work are twisted into an inconceivable shape. The conjuny's loss is $30,000, and comes at a time of year when the plant is kept in constant operation.

Ellevator 'D' was also damaged, a large hole being made in the roof.

The smokestack on the C. P. R. round house was also blown down.
