Fresh Running Water for your Farm

A Fairbanks-Morse Fresh Water System delivers water direct from the well, spring, lake or river—puts the pump right at the source of supply. The water is not stored in a tank.

Everything that running water, brings to the city dweller can be yours—right on your farm—at the turn of a faucet. You can have hot water if you wish in the bathroom, kitchen or laundry. You and your family will be free from the drudgery of carrying heavy pails of water from the pump.

The outfit is very simple. Consists of pressure displacement pump which is located in well, spring or creek—a storage tank which holds compressed air only—an air compressor, and a 1½ Type Z engine. The engine is only used for filling the tank with compressed air. These tanks are made in sizes sufficient for small installation, or large enough to pump 25,000 gallons of water at one time. The air pipe leads from the air tank to the pump in the well—and the water line leads from the pump to the house, from which you can run as many water lines as you may desire. When the water tap is opened the pressure from the air in the tank forces the pump in the well to work, and the fresh water instantly flows. There is always a constant pressure, so that you do not have to wait one second for the flow of the fresh water.
