DOWN THE VISTA OF THE AGES.

(By A. Banker).

To those who take an interest in the history of the remote past and in glimpsing down the dim vista of time, a day spent in the great museum at Cairo is a day of keen gratification and enjoyment. Entering the splendid and massive vestibule the visitor is immediately in an atmosphere of antiquity, and surrounded with relics both of the very days of civilization and specific specif very dawn of civilization and also of the more refined and artistic period of those powerful monarchs whose con-quests raised Egypt to the zenith of its quests raised Egypt to the zenith of its power, and whose massive achievements remain to this day almost untouched by the disintegrating and despeiling of time.

Here for instance is a magnificent state charlot, its gilded frontal of leather embossed with warlike figures or with an artistic design; perhaps the very charlot on which the Great Rameses careered at the head of his victorious army through the palm-bordered avenues of Memphas after some great conquest; here a number of cases of valuable and handsome jewellery, worn by able and handsome jewellery, worn by the queens and princesses of Egypt in those days of regal splendor; or here a series of painted papyri, still fresh and bright, figuring the fanciful experience of the soul after death, and depicting its appearance before a strange and dread tribunal, which is to adjudicate upon its final doom.

Fish first declared that the seat of trouble in pneumonia cases was not, as is generally supposed, in the lungs, but in the small cells in the bony framework at the top of the nose. The pneumococcus, or disease germ, he said, was not harmful, except when pent up in a cell of this sort. Then, he ex-

"From these cells the disease works rapidly down to the lungs, and to all appearances, these organs tmmediately became the seat of trouble," said the physician. "However, the fuel which is feeding the flames of disease still is being furnished from the cells at the top

"The simple remedy, consequently, is to draw this dangerous pus from these cells. That is what was done in the man for driving nails.

JAPANESE WOMAN THIEF.

Captain of a Band of Female Robbers That Had Stolen From 100 Houses.

A Japanese woman named Tora (or tiger), who had come to be known in the robber class that she had joined as "Tora, the Serpent," has just been arrested by the Kojimachi police in the grounds of Hachiman Temple, Fukagawa, says the Japan Times.

In her early years—she is now 43—she was very beautiful, and held many she was very beautiful, and held many situations as a nurse, always with a good name for industry and faithfulness. It was her good looks and an admirer that brought her dismissal by her master, and from that time she turned to make her living by prey.

At the age of 30 she was captain of a gang of female thieves. At Kamakura she saw an old gentleman and pretended to be in a fit. He tended her kindly, but while he was busy she abstracted £16 from his bag. With this money she travelled to the capitat, where she continued her depradations. She called at the house of Count Matsudaira and, representing herself as a poor woman deserted by her husband, worked upon the sympathy of the counstess, who engaged her as handmaid. She soon gained the esteem of the family, who treated her almost as a relative. ily, who treated her almost as a relative.
After a few months the whole house hold went on a flower viewing excursion, leaving Tora alone at home. She proceeded to collect all the valuables she could lay hands on, loaded them on three large wagons, and made off.

A sentence of imprisonment did not after her, and before her last arrest she had robbed nearly a hundred houses and stolen money and goods amounting to thousands of pounds. She now expresses a desire to marry a certain humble, honest citizen.

BEATRICE GRIMSHAW CALLS ON NATIVES OF GOARI-BARI.

They are Very Fond of Human Flesh Cooked With Sago and Persist in the Diet.

From a letter just received in London, England, from that adventureleving Irish girl, Beatrice Grimshaw, who writes stories of the South Seas, it appears that she has been enjoying herself in her own peculiar way in and around New Guinea, which is to be the around New Guinea, which is to be the scene of the novel she is now writing. Her letter, which is dated from the Guilf of Paupa, is, in part, as follows:

"Day before yesterday we called at Goari-Bari, a notorious place, where Chalmers, the famous missionary, was eaten in 1902, and where a terrible fracas with natives occurred in 1904, resulting not long afterward in the suicide of Governor Robinson. It is an island close to the mainland. Few white people have been there, and most of them were eaten—no one has ever stopped a night, and no white woman was ever there before myself. The governor, a friend of his, Cotonel Antill; two missionaries, the governor's secretary, myself and six armed police from Port Moresby (natives) were

THE LANDING PARTY.

The natives were extremely excited and jumpy; nervous, one would say. They received us quietly enough, and accepted presents of beads, etc., but when I and two others were in one of the houses, they came and held up a joint of cooked human flesh before me, laughing. It looked horrid and smelt worse. I think it was ribs.

"There was also a canoe full of skulls in the river, and many skulls in the houses. We were not attacked, however, and we walked all through the village, saw a general family sleeping-house 190 yards long, divided into numberless compariments (the flat system, evidently)—human bodies laid out in the branches of trees to decay, which is their method of burial, and some strange which they relieve in greatly. We went back in the ship quite peacefully and afterward the governor (Judge Murray) went ashore again and brought off the bones of Chalmers, the missionary.

"When we were on shore, we asked the people, through interpreters, how they cooked their cannibal food, and they said with native sage, and showed us some in rolls. Told by the governor that they must give up these practices, they said it would be hard to do so, for human flesh tasted much better than pork or dog.

"I was down at Thursday Island last week, and went down in a diver's dress among the pearlishell beds. The place swarms with sharks and all gators, but I was told they could be scared off by loosening the wrist of the dress so as to let some air out, so I chanced it, and came up all right, after a good walk at the bottom on a coral reef."

Thousand Pounds Disappeared From

The London, England, police are inoverlighting the stealing of a thousand sovereight from a bank in the city on December 31 or January 1 last, but up to the present not the slightest clue has been found to lead to the elucidation of an extraordinary mystery.

The bank in question is thoroughly well known. On the afternoon of Dec. 31 the money in current we be the

31 the money in current use by cashiers during the day was, in accerdance with custom, packed into bags—the gold in bags of a thousand pounds and the silver in bags of a hundred pounds. This was collected by two porters and placed by them on a trolley, which was then taken to the lift and left there for over an hour, this being occasioned by the extra pressure of business arising from the

On the trolley was one special leather bag (in addition to the other bags of money) in which were three separate canvas lags, each containing a thou-sand soveregns, and another contain-ing eight hundred sovereigns. This leather bag was locked by the cashier who had placed the money in it, and the key was deposited by him in a drawer falong with other loose keys) which drawer was not locked. The position of this key was known to everybody in the bank building, and possibly to some people outside

The next morning the strong room was opened by the same official who locked it the previous night. The bags of money were taken out by two porters, one of whom had assisted in the "Donal, man," she says, "ye're makin' an awfu' row. What'll the neighbors think?"

"Note the previous evening. The leaththe bag was taken to the same cashier who had locked it the night before. On unlocking the bag, one of the canvas bags econtaining 1,000 sovereigns was missing, but the other two and the one centaining 800 sovereigns were intact. The most minute enquiries were made before the city police were called in, but no trace of the bag or the money could be found.

Miss Mary Levesque, 313 Stadacina St., Hochelaga, Montreal writes:—"I have found Zam-Buk an excellent remedy for skin eruptions. Up to this Spring I was bothered for almost five years with a red rash, small pimples and sores on my face and on the scalp thro' the hair. Nothing I used would clear this rash from the skin until I began using Zam-Buk. This salve has effectually and I believe permanently taken off those unsightly pimples and sores from both scalp and face. I shall recommend Zam-Buk to all my friends."
