PROGRESS OF THE WAR

[November 30 to December 6] DURING the week under review the war entered the twenty-ninth month of its course, and reached a very critical stage. The week was a momentous and nemorable one, not only in actual hostilities and the results therefrom, but as well in the Cabinet crisis in Great Britain which will necessarily greatly influence the future conduct of the war. The Western campaign resulted in only slight changes from the situation at the close of the week preceding, though artillery actions were incessant and vigorous. No important advances in force appear to have been attempted by the Entente Allies: and the German attempt on the left bank of the Meuse succeeded only in the capture of a few front-line trenches.

The greatest interest in the week's hostilities centred in the Eastern campaign, especially in Rumania, where the Teutonic forces advancing form the north west, west, and southwest succeeded in taking the capital, Bukarest, and in com pleting the occupation of over one-third of the small war-tried kingdom. In Galicia and in the Carpathians west of Bukowina the Russians fought vigorously over a front of nearly 200 miles in extent and were able to make some progress, but it was insufficient to divert the Teutoni drive on Rumania.

(f the Caucasian campaign little can be said, as both sides claimed some suc cess; and in Persia the Turks reported a minor gain. Nothing transpired concerning the campaigns in Mesopotamia and

From the East African campaign no news was received since that of the week preceding, when it was reported that the Germans still maintaining armed resistance, were making a final stand in the southeast of the colony which has now virtually passed from under German rule

The Balkan campaign was prosecuted with great vigor throughout the week. In Dobrudia the Russians and Rumanians made further progress southward, and captured from Von Mackensen's forces the bridgehead at Tchernavoda, on the Danube, on the line of railway from Constanza to Bukarest. This success, however, was insufficient to prevent the forces of the Central Powers from crossing the Danube and aiding in the capture of Bukarest. In Serbia, north of Monastir at at several points on the Macedonian front, the Entente Allies made further progress. The situation in Athens. however, claimed the greatest interest of the week in this campaign; and at the week' close the situation was very serious in deed-just how serious not being definite ly known, as the telegraph and cabl service was again in the hands of the Greek royalists. Considerable fighting took place in Athens, and the royalis troops and supporters had abandoned all pretence of submitting to the demands of the Entente Allies. All the nationals of the Allies were leaving Athens for Piræus and it was manifest that the Allies would have to employ all necessary force render the King and his supporters im potent further to aid the Central Powers r to interfere with the military operations of the Allies against their enemies.

prevailed throughout the week. The enemy submarines were very active duaing the week, and their field of operations was widely extended, as can be seen in "News of the Sea." under which heading we reprint from the daily press all the reported disasters to shipping esnlting from submarines or other causes

Of the Austro-Italian campaign there was no news of any considerable changes in the situation, though much activity

Almost overshadowing interest in the London, long expected, reached the be ginning of the end when, on Tuesday, Mr. Asquith tendered his resignation to the King. The King first asked Mr. Bonar Law to form a ministry, but he expressed his inability to do so and recommended the selection of Mr. Lloyd George, who accepted the task. As we go to press we have no word of the probable composition of Mr. Lloyd George's Cabinet, though it must necessarily be of a coalition character. That Sir Edward Grey will be a for a year with Sixth Field Company, unlikely, for the Foreign Office under his administration, especially since the war He arrived in Canada a few weeks ago began, has been severely criticized. If and has since been a patient at Convaleswe might be permitted to hazard a guess, cent Hospital, Halifax. Sapper Babbitt it would be that some of the permanent officials of the Foreign Office will be reshock, after one of the heavy engagements tired on pension, just as some Generals on the Belgian front early in June last, who have disappointed expectations have and spent some time in the English been retired. Cabinet ministers do not govern Great Britain, it is the bureaucracy Sapper Babbitt is now on three months' of permanent officials which does so. oureaucrats have much to answer for in the present critical times.
