Athletics in Japaness Schools. Athletics hold an important but sub-ordinate position in the schools of Japan. Once a year there is a gathering of all the students in a district to engage in athletic contests. In those seen by Mr. Hearn, and described in "Glimpsee of Unfamiliar Japan," (6.00 boys and girls from all the schools within a distance of 25 miles were entered to take part. A circular race track, roomy enough for an army, allowed four different kinds of games to be per-formed at the same time. There were races between the best run-mers of different schools, and races in which the runners were tied together in pairs, the left leg of one to the right leg of the other. There were races between the best runners of different schools. and races in which addition after awhile a little advertisement, carefully and diplomatically worlded, and the runners between the best runners of different schools. and races in which each one had to pick as she ran three balls of different colors out of a number scattered over the turf.
The most wonderful spectacle was the dumbell exercise. Six thousand boys and girls, massed in ranks about 500 deep; and girls, massed in ranks about 500 deep; and girls, massed in ranks about 500 deep; and girls, massed, in ranks about 500 deep; and girls, massed in the book of a little generating together at the signal of the morning and ended at five in the evening. Then, at a signal, fully 6,000 voices peaked of the national anthem and concluder with three cheers for the Emperor auto of shouting when they cheer, chant witha long cry.
