

What is it? Vapo-Cresolene is the vapor of Cresolene. You put the Cresolene in the vaporizer, then light the lamp just beneath. When the vapor rises, you inhale it. What is Vapo-Cresolene? It's something like carbolic acid, only much more powerful. It kills all germs of disease and heals inflamed membranes. It's the perfect cure for whooping cough. Nothing equals it for asthma, catarrh, hay fever, colds. 3

Barron had had a hard jolt from a girl in the east. We didn't know about that at first and couldn't understand his deep rooted antipathy to everything in petticoats about Goshen's ranchhouse. He was hardly civil to Mrs. Goshen herself, though she was old enough to be his mother, and when her nieces came up from Walla Walla to spend a couple of weeks Barron begged to go off with Gingerface, the vaquero, and Tom Smalley after stray cattle. But one of the girls, and the smartest and prettiest of the lot, Minervy Bowles, remained at the ranch. He spent most of his time dodging her. He'd change jobs with anybody about the place, no matter what the job was, if he could only keep away from the ranchhouse, and the boys soaked it to him well-'deed and they did.

But Minervy would corral him now and then, and 'twas just beautiful to see how she played him when he was hooked. She'd corner him on the veranda and get him talking about the east and about college and bugs and minerals. She wasn't no slouch on education herself, Minervy wasn't, though she wasn't letting on to Barron. He must have judged her caliber from seeing her ride and shoot, and he set her down first card out of the box as what the eastern papers call "a product of the wild and woolly west." He was used to seeing a girl all fixed up in silk and furbelows presiding at a teatable or something like that.

But I want you to show me the female creature that ain't a match for the male every time. Minervy didn't start in caring a brass farthing for Barron, but it piqued her that he still fought shy. She just laid herself out to bring him down, and-well, you know the old saying about playing

My woman was cooking for the Goshens then. Reckon one woman most usually sees another woman's game first. She let on to me before many weeks that Minervy was just about eating her heart out over young

I didn't believe it at first. Minervy seemed just the same when Barron was around as ever-snappy and full of life and jollying the peace of mind clean out of the boy. But I noticed

THEN CAME A GAME OF DODGING. when he was off on the range she drooped, and I finally took my woman's

And it got me mad, too-mad with Barron. Minervy was as fine a filly as ever cavorted over these here foothills, and to have a darned tenderfoot come out here and mix her up so that she was off her feed just hit me hard.

To kinder help matters along I be gun to hint pretty strong to him. But it was dangerous business. I never come nearer to passing in my checks and settling with the banker in my life! You see, Barron'd been jollied more or less right along, for all the boys was on to the play, but we was careful about using names. Let me tell you, cowpunchers may be a tough lot, but we don't bandy about women's names not good women's names, leastwise.

I says to the boy one day; "If you wasn't such a thick headed, all sufficient rooster, you'd see that Minervy was just eating of her heart out for you. Why don't you walk up to her like a man and offer to marry her?"

Now, mind you, I was only hintingdidn't intend to give no offense at allbut that boy was sure quick with his gun. Lord! The muzzle looked as big as one of them cannon over to the

"Don't you ever use that lady's name again in such a manner," he says, "or, old as you be, I'll turn loose on you!" Them may not have been just his words, for I admit I was kind of flurried, but they include his meaning all right. He was always a gentleman and kind spoken, but he was gentler than ever after that. Reckon he pitied her st first. Wondered, I s'pose, how a nice girl like her could get to liking a no count chap like him. A man who's been jilted in love is the darndest critter that ever walked. He begun by being even more thoughtful and attentive. He rode the range most of the time, but when one of the boys came in on an errand Bar-ron would send something to Minervynew flower or some bit of mineral he picked up in the foothills or a big bunch of desert roses.

One day Gingerface rode in and dropped an Indian basket of ripe cherries in Minervy's lap. "He sent 'em," says the greaser, and a sunset wasn't a patch to the girl's face.

She sent back her thanks to Barron by me, and when Barron asked me if she 'peared to like the cherries I put it on thick, now, I tell you.

The next morning he started off with basket and rode nigh twenty mile back towards the ranch, but not on the regular trail, where he'd found the cherry tree. Nobody saw just what happened at that cherry tree but the parties that took part in the game. Therefore hearsay evidence will have to go.

The cherry tree grew on a side hill among a lot of bowlders. They'd have made a powerful good cover for Injuns in the old days. They made a powerful good cover for something quite as bad on this day I'm telling you of.

Barron picketed his cayuse at the foot of the hill and climbed up to the tree. He was astride of a limb and had about picked the basket full when he all of a sudden discovered a grizzly, something like the size of a well grown bull, meandering along after cherries

Well, there was that cowpuncher up the tree without even his gun-he'd slipped it off when he started to climb the trunk-and a big bear standing on his shind legs and stretching himself to reach the boy's dangling feet.

Soon's the bear saw he couldn't claw him out he made up his mind to shake him out, and only that Barron shook out on the uphill side and away from the bear did he escape that time.

Then come a game of dodging around howlders. Barren was light active, but the bear was eager and bound to make an example of the first feller he'd caught in his orchard. And the old devil was wise too. He seemed to keep between Barron and his gun all the time.

Well, them two circled about there a dozen times until Barron was well nigh played to a frazzle. But 'twas run or die, and Barron suddenly found himself dead anxious to live even if he had been throwed down by a girl in the east.

There was a rock a few rods away that looked high enough to make it a good place to be on, and he knew grizzlies aren't usually much on the climb. So, getting dead sore on his present gyrations, Barron broke for the rock. He reached it just ahead of the bear and that's all. The trail was three good miles away, but the air is clear in these parts, and Minervy carried a good pair of glasses when she rode out. I suppose she rode toward the range that day because her heart was in that direction. Leastwise through the glasses she seen two black figgers on the hillside, one on top of the rock and one gyrating round it. They looked funny, and she rode over and saw it was a man and a bear.

Run for help? Guess not! Minervy was born and bred in this country, and she had a hair lariat slung to her saddlebow. Barron tried to keep her away from danger, but she rode right up within proper distance, dropped the loop over that bear's head as pretty as a picture and then set her pony down the hill at a canter.

Before Barron could get his gun and run up to the grizzly the brute was choked plumb dead. And I reckon right then and there Barron decided that a girl who knew what to do for a man besieged by a grizzly would wear a dern sight better in this country than a girl who looked pretty behind a tea-

Leastwise, he and Minervy filled the basket with cherries again and rode back to the ranch to tell the Goshens, and two months later, when the par son come through "rounding up" the couples, as he done once a year, they were married, and I ain't never heard that Barron was sorry he went after them cherries.

Breaking Up a Witness. In no way can barristers better display their acuteness than by seeing at a glance the character of the witnesses they are about to examine and by treating them accordingly. Erskine was famous at this. In a case in which he was engaged a commercial traveler came into the witness box dressed in the height of fashion and wearing a starched white necktie folded in the Brummel fold. In an instant Erskine knew his man, though he had never seen him before, and said to him, with an air of careless amusement, "You were born and bred in Manchester, I perceive." Greatly astonished at this opening remark, the man admitted that he was. "Exactly," observed the great cross examiner in a conversational tone. "I knew it from the absurd tie of your neckcloth."

The roars of laughter, coming from every person in the court, with the single exception of the unfortunate witness, which followed this rejoinder completely effected Erskine's purpose, which was to put the witness in a state of agitation and confusion before touching on the facts concerning which he had come to give evidence.-London News.

Waiters on Horseback. In great French houses of days gone by dinner was announced by the blowing of hunting horns, and it is on rec ord that at certain gala feasts the dishes were brought in by servants in full armor, mounted upon caparisoned horses, a practice we could only look for during the reign of chivalry. Of the attendants at dinner the carver and server took precedence over all the others. They stood probably on each side of their lord. The server, it may he mentioned was the officer who placed the dishes on the tabla.

Convicts of Abyssinia. In Abyssinia political offenders and obstructionists are arrested, chained and placed on the small tableland of Abba Salama, a high, rocky and precipitous mountain about thirty miles from Adowa. So sheer and steep are its sides that the prisoners are drawn up by ropes. Their chance of escaping is impossible, unless they run the risk of dashing themselves into eternity on the rocks below. On this lonely height there is soil on which they may grow grain, and there are wells with good water. There is no speaker to keep order, and they may, if they choose, abuse the prime ministers and crowned heads to their hearts' content, but they return no more to the ways of

At the bottom of the case they put some of the composition they put in rockets, and on top of each star is some more of it. By mixing certain chemicals green and red lights are produced. Green lights like those used in death scenes on the stage at the theater are made by mixing a great quantity of nitrate of barytes with small quantities of sulphur, chlorate of potash, charcoal pulverized and ar-

An Ancient French Custom Anciently in many parts of France when a sale of land took place it was the custom to have twelve adult witnesses accompanied by twelve little boys, and when the price of the land was paid and its surrender took place the ears of the boys were pulled, and they were beaten severely, so that the pain thus indicted should make an impression upon their memory, and, if required afterward, they might bear witness to the sale.

Heredity. "What is heredity, mamma?" asked the little girl, spelling the word out through her falling tears and waiting to write down the meaning. "It is-'m, how shall I explain it?

Oh," said the mother, "something you get from your father or me." And the small child wrote down on her paper of home lessons, "Heredity-

Weight-distributing.

Shoe soles are level and unveilding. Foot soles bear upon them at four spots only, viz: at ball and heel, great toe and outer edge.

These are the calloused places, the tired, painy, overworked surfaces.

Nature intended that the whole area of the foot sole should support the body, as a child's foot on sand, an Indian's in a moccasin.

The RESILIA is the only shoe which distributes pressure evenly over the foot sole.

It supports the arch, eases the tired spots, and reduces greatly the labor in walking, as well as minimizing the strain on upper leather and sole of the shoe. Observe foot sole, lower shoe.
