Poetry. MANY A TIME AND OFT. BY AMELIA D. EDWARDS.

When the homse is still, and the day is done, And the stars are out aloft, I sit by the failing fire alone, And think of the years that are past and gone, Many a time and oft. I dream of that village beside the sea; I dream of that seat by the trysting-tree : And of one who will never come back to me-Ah! many a time and oft !

When the city is hushed, and the chimes are still, And the voice of the crowd is soft, My thoughts wander on at their own wild will. And my tears fail fast and my heart is chill. Many a time and oft : I dream of the hopes all faded and fled, Of the vow that is broken, the shaft that is so And one to whom I forever sun dead— Ah : many a time and oft :

SPRING VIOLETS.

Lifting the leaves boside a brooklet's bed, Lifting the leaves boside a brooklet's bed, I caught a glimpse of violets looking through. Lo ! all the ground beaesth was stained with blue. Soft as the azure bending overhead: There lay they dreaming close beneasth my fread, So deeply hid that scarce the beaded dew That damped the hilisides of their covert knew; Only the weedy brook their pulses fed. I had not thought a single bud did grow In all the verdure of that grassy field, While they were thick as stars in winter skies; But carcless feet like mine will never know Where beauty loves to hide, all unrevealed Save to the closer search of loving eyes.
