Why RailWays

Outbreaks on the Iron Road are Near ly Always Quelled by Troops.

Experience has shown that no general railway strike anywhere in the world has ever succeeded when push

There are several reasons for this ne being that it is exceedingly difficult to picket effectively the property of a railway company. A factory dock, or colliery can be watched, an the men within "persuaded" (i.e., in timidated) into quitting work. But i s quite another matter to deal with thousands of railwaymen scattered along hundreds of miles of track.

More important still, however, is the act that in railway strikes govern ments always, sooner or later, take sides against the strikers. They have to. And the more successful the strike, the sooner are they compelled o take action, because experience has shown that anything approaching to universal stoppage of all the railvays in any country means so great suffering and misery to the com nunity, and inflicts such intolerable convenience, that no governmen an tolerate it.

No Trains Allowed to Run. The biggest railway strike that was ver organised, and the one that cam nearest to being successful, was tha started in June, 1894, by Eugene Debs the then president of the American Railway Union.

For many years this remarkable nan had been preparing for the strug gle-silently, secretly, surely. result was that when the strike was called there was no partial, halfnearted response, as happened the other day over here.

At one and the same instant of time rom San Francisco to New York, and rom the confines of Canada on the north to those of Mexico on the south, over an area the size of Europe, the ailwaymen all stopped work.

No single train was permitted to ener or leave Chicago, which is the clearing-house for the provision trade f the world, the centre to which al the United States railways converged In less than a week ten thousand towns and cities were foodless. The people of the United States, who, at the beginning, were mostly in sym pathy with the strikers, suddenly very excellent chance of dying starvation if the strike were allows o continue Frenzied appeals were made resident Cleveland, who responde y calling out the military and pro laiming martial law. From that mo gent the strike was doomed. One day seemed within an ace of succeed ing; the next, owing to the President's ction, it had collapsed utterly And the history of this famous rail way strike has been the history, more or less, of all other railway strikes.

The nearer they come to success, the further they are away from it. It was the calling out of the reserv law on the part of the French govern ment that killed the strike which for a time paralysed the railways of the orth and west of France in Octobe of last year. In this instance the gov rnment first called the striking re servists to the colours, and then com pelled them to work as engine-drivers, guards and singalmen, and so render heir own strike futile.

It was rather brutal tactics, pernaps; certainly so from the men's point of view; and M. Briand, the Premier, was bitterly reproached for it n the French Parliament. He answered that many thousands of people were on the verge of starvation when he acted as he did, and that the right of the community to exist was superior to the right of the workman

Much the same thing was said by Ir. Thompson, manager of the Caledonian Railway, and by Mr. Walker. manager of the North British Railway their systems by methods that were even more drastic. It was in depth of winter, with snow three feet deep or the ground, yet the companies evicted their tenant railway strikers from their poor cottages, and left them by the wayside to starve or freeze. Milipound a pound of almonds, add two tary and police were present to quell eggs, a cupful of sugar and a teathe rioting that broke out, and in the > tates, on the treaty coast. The task began with a tour of th ugged and indented eastern coast from Conception Bay to Notre Dame Bay (not a treaty shore), in the mai steamer Fogota with the Minister Marine. Besides the usual ports call for mails, the steamer pushed u the flords to every fishing port of consequence on the eastern coast, givng Mr. Smith time to visit the dealers and the fishermen and to acquain imself with their methods of handl ng the fish.

The principle object of this eas coast trip was to determine whethe he small "trap fish" which are tak en on that shore in abundance ar uitable for the foreign markets. The onclusion was that most of them are insuitable, but that a few, the var ety known as "caplin," a bait fish bout the size of a smelt, may be de eloped as a food product in our mar kets. The quantities of these small fish are prodigious, though the season is short. The Minister of Marine had taken the visitor up into Concer tion Bay, 'to see fish in quantities,' and he saw them. An old fisherman who complained that something was wrong with the "leader" net to his trap had his trap filled too rapidly to e able to mend it.

For what would be termed a busi ness trip, incidentally, this voyage over the four great bays of the eastern coast-Conception, Trinity, Bona vista and Notre Dame-and up into the coves, arms and fiords of each was a sost remarkable scenic display. It had its humors, too. Many of the harbors are too small or too primitive
