AND CANADA GENERAL ADVERTISER.

LONDON, (CANADA) FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1846. NUMBER 44.

THE LONDON COFFEE HOUSE.
J. H. JOYCE.

BEGS most sincerely to thank his old Friends and the Public for the truly liberal support and patronage with which they have liberally distinguished him.
He takes this opportunity to announce that his premises have been rebuilt in brick, extended and fitted upon a scale of accommodation, elegance, and comfort every way surpassing the old concern, and second to none in British North America.
Those who have been familiar with such public places of convenience as the "English Coffee House," "The French Restaurant," and the "American Hotel," will find in his new establishment a happy concentration of each. The most of pleasure may be spent in a quiet and comfortable way without the least trouble; and the traveller can realize for the brief period of his stay a resting place and a home.
Descending more minutely to particulars, J. H. C. would state, that having arranged the London Coffee House for general accommodation, he will be ready at all reasonable hours to supply Tea, Coffee, Luncheons, Dinners, Suppers, Stews, and occasional Refreshments, either by the Meal or to Boarders continuously, with or without lodging.
The News Room, supplying all the leading papers and popular periodicals of the day, is a room in a separate building, which few in the present age of good taste and reservation will overlook or despise.
None but experienced cooks and civil waiters will be kept, and neither gambling or upping will be tolerated on the premises.
In conclusion, he would state that, in entering for men, he has not forgotten his civilized friends the horse. A fireproof brick Stable has been built in the rear, covered with iron, where a careful Ostrler will be always in readiness to shelter and attend to his noble animal.
