Mr. Reid Says It Is Necessary to Take Every Means to Attract the Small Farmer to the Show,

Writing of the London Fair and other thibitions in the province, a writer the Toronto Globe says: The idea of establishing lasses for the small farmer appealed to me forcibly upon viewing the exhibits at London Fair last week. The competitors almost to a man were breeders looking only to the advertisement they were drawing and the high prices they might get from the few animals on exhibit. I was fortunate in securing an interview with Mr. W. J. Reid, president of the London Far, and of having the privilege of discussing with him the prac ticability of the scheme to establish classes for the average farmer. Mr. Reid a prominent merchant of London, and gentleman keenly interested in agriulture. For thirty-five years he has been clasely identified with the Western Fair at London and for the past ten years has presided over its development. He expressed pleasure at having the opportunity of talking over the matter of the exhibition's getting closer to the average farmer, for, he said, he was onscious of the fact that this individua is not deriving the benefit from the fair that it is intended to bring him. The management of the London Exhibition, he said, has never considered it an indignity to "drum up" exhibits. Mr. A. M. Hunt, the energetic secretary of the association, who was present during get the agricultural classes filled up. As the event which transpired last week was approaching and Mr. Hunt became anxious about entries, he sat down and wrote 150 personal letters to men he beleved should enter. The horse entries which show a falling off this year, were not being filled up and he called up a number of breeders on the phone and personally invited them to exhibit. Some f them told him they had sold the best of their stock as a result of the high
