Terriers and Locals Will Battle For Top Rung In Opener Here Wednesday

Revamped Terriers Considered Formidable Team, But Still Bit of Mystery.

Courageous Stand Made by Young Team in Stratford Kills Off Lingering Doubts.

If London fans had been asked choose opposition for the Big Six opener here Wednesday night, it's probable that the choice would have fallen on the Terriers, for, despite Galt's thrilling searches with over Percy Lesueur's overtime win over Percy Lesueur's Windsor Hornets, they are still a bit of to the customers in their windsor Hornets, they are with their a mystery to the customers in their revamped state.

The luck of the schedule draw, combined with the victories of both teams in their opening games, gives the game here Wednesday night added interest, as the loser will be jolted off the toprung of the abbreviated Big Six ladder, it won't be an awful tumble but it's one neither team hankers to take just at this stage. at this stage.

The fans who witnessed the locals against the Indians are sure they'll do this season. The black-sweatered crew has every attribute to make it dominant on the ice and has a personality that should make it the most popular team that ever represented this city in any series. Stratford subjected them to a stiff deliberate gruelling, but they never faltered for a moment, and the fans who followed them over into the Classic City cast any lingering doubts of the team's abilities aside. They'll be on the band wagon to the last game. Close-Checking Crew.

Terriers had a close-checking, sturdy team last year which lacked scoring punch. This year, with Boucher and Aurle, stars from the denuded Northland, added, they should have a constant scoring threat to throw into their game, making them one of the most formidable teams on the circuit. The Terriers played but one pre-season game and won that at Grimsby. It was a 2-1 score. Friday night, at Windsor, the game was marked by close checking rather than by scoring, but considering the two net-minders engaged, Murray and Farrell, the deduction that the Terriers are still not a heavy-scoring machine may be somewhat discounted.

tion that the Terriers are still not a heavy-scoring machine may be somewhat discounted.

The games that Stratford and London played against the Peach Kings gave a good line on the two senior teams in their first meeting, and if the same holds good for Galt, London has a slight edge in the chances here Wednesday. Somerville may be back Wednesday night, but it is doubftul. His knee has not cleared up yet and rest is what it needs. His presence would undoubtedly be more valuable later on and if an appearance Wednesday night should carry risk with it, it is likely that he will not be put into this game. Marsden is taking no chances on injuries crippling the team and has asked that Gerald Ziegler be got out to drills and carried as a reserve. Ziegler is a good carried as a reserve.

It will take a lot of injuries to cripple the local team with so many capable subs in the offing.

Jerry Lowrey has gone home to Ot-tawa, but will be back for Wednesday's

Bill Starkings inadvertently was le in for scoring a goal against London, and also for mixing it with Burke. Leamy was the penitent culprit in the first instance, and Lowrey was in the no-decision bout with Burke. It was the toughest of luck that Leamy had. Moore had stopped Carson's terrific drive, and fearing a free-for-all swoop in by the Indian forwards, Leamy flipped the puck—as he thought to clear it—into the net.

Toronto Star: "'Dad' Ashley, the Preston defence stalwart, has endeared himself to the Toronto fans. Always clean and fair, the big fellow became a clean and fair, the big fellow became a favorite in Preston's first game against Osgoode Hall, and improved in subsequent frays. Toronto fans like big Gene Fraser, of Niagara Falls, for the same qualities. Their success on rival clubs in the 'Big Six' group will be watched closely."

Stratford Beacon-Herald: "In Moore, the former Aura Lee boy, the Londoners presented a goalkeeper of the highest calibre. Some said he was lucky. Undoubtedly he was lucky on several occasions, but his work was too consistent to be characterized altogether as luck. Time and again Bill and Frank Carson or Griffin or Kelterborn let fly wicked drives which the London goal custodian calmly kicked out of the net. He used his lower limbs with more telling effect than any visiting goal-keeper seen here in a long time."

All the New York papers, without exception, praise hockey as a spectacular sport, but a couple of the stories were good for a laugh.

One writer made a moan because

The other laugh comes from a complaint about our rules. After viewing one game, George B. Underwood in The Sun has criticism for rules that have taken expert hockey legislators a lifetime to formulate. Laff this off:

"One more thing that slowed things down was the new rule prohibiting a team from having more than three players behind its blue line.

"This rule was framed to speed up the play. Instead, it slows it down. Forwards can't go back to rest up. So they 'rest' at mid-ice. You can't over-

They are afraid of making a poor throw by a shutout score. or of a man attempting to score on the throw. You rarely see a catcher today making a throw with bases filled, or cond and third occupied, or even ird occupied. Often such a throw would win a ball game. The base run-ners, realizing that the catcher will not throw, take unusually long leads and lay themselves open to retirement. If they felt that the catcher might throw they would not take the long leads and, by hugging the base closely, they would give an advantage to the team in the Ewing was a good judge of batsmen nd he was also one of the fastest eatchers that ever lived. Few catchers are fast because the constant crouch-ing in giving signals hurts their legs ing in giving signals hurts their legs and causes them to slow up. Maybe Ewing was a superman. I do not know; but Ewing continued being fast on his feet, and he was also a grand hitter. To show the intelligence he had, not alone as a catcher, but in general play as well I need say only that during he as well, I need say only that during he entire time Ewing was a member of the New York team he was the direct ing head of that organization. The National league used to have an edge on the American league in catching, but in the last ten years the advantage has been with the American. Talent moves in cycles, it seems. There will be several excellent players at one position at the same time, and other positions will have mediocre performers. Then, suddenly, some other position develops a batch of good mentabout baseball and this applies, of course, to catching.

Trying to pick the best catcher of all time is as difficult as trying to pick the best pitcher. I never saw "Buck" Ewing catch, but sharp students of baseball that watched him have told me that he was the best of his day and the best of all time. Those who were intimately connected with the career of Roger Bresnahan say that he was hetter than Ewing and topped in the last ten years the advantage has been at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them so he could block runners at the plate, and he adopted them shall be accertant plot of the New York team should relinquish the veteran pilot of the New York team should relinquish the rins. Ewing must have been a grand receiver. He was a wonder, they say, at throwing. Probably no catcher ever threw faster nor more accurately. Ewing never hesitated about throwing to any base if there was a chance for a putout. Many catchers hesitate. They are afraid of making a poor throw or of a man attempting to score on the series, who caught for Bos-ward and the series of 1905, New York against Philadelphia, he was the talk of the baseball world because of the way he handled the star pitchers out of five games, and the struggle is out of five games, and the struggle is well remembered to this day because well remembered to this day because of the was a canny worker and he had all the tricks of the catcher. Good Snap Throw.

Martin Bergen, who caught for Boston in the 90's, was a catcher of the Ewing type. He had a wonderful snap throw and was a good hitter. A smart catcher, he had an erratic disposition, and his violent jealousies ruined what might otherwise have been the most brilliant career of any catcher in the game. Also, the disposition proved fatal to Bergen, for on returning home from a trip, he killed his entire family and then took his own life.
