Poetry

How sweet it is in the dewy morn,
When summer winds are blowing;
To wander forth with lightest steps,
Where flowers are sweetly growing;
Or by some lovely rippling brook,
Whose waters slowly glide;
'Tis such a bliss, where flowers of beauty rear,
Are shadowed in the tide.

Medical Properties of Eggs

For burrs or scabs nothing is more soothing than the white of an egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer, as a varnish for a burn than collodion, and being always at hand can be applied immediately. It is also more cooling than the sweet oil of cotton, which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from ordinary accidents of this kind; and anything which excludes air and prevents inflammation is the thing to be at once applied.

The English Farmers

James Caird, the eminent agricultural authority, in a letter to the Times on British agricultural prospects and American competition says:—
"It may be useful to show the pressing need for the early removal of every impediment which unnecessarily hampers in the competition which we are now exposed. Nothing like the present depression in agricultural interest has been seen since the repeal of the corn laws. In nine years there have been seven defective wheat harvests, the last culminating in intensity and including in its grasp a portion of the animal and to other products of the land. In England where the bulk of the wheat crop is grown, there has been lost in the last year four more than the whole years of the wheat crop, a loss to wheat growers of more than £20,000,000 sterling. The introduction of foreign wheat and cereals is of immense benefit to the consuming classes of Europe. American statements believe they are rapidly gaining control of this trade, and maintain it at lower prices. This must be met by the production here of articles which will not bear long storage or carriage, such as milk, fresh butter, and fresh meat, vegetables, hay, straw, potatoes and sugar beets, grapes, farms, dairying and market gardening. All the interests in land, whether of the owner, occupier or laborer, must be disinterested. The control of the labor and capital to the United States and Canada, which has already commenced, and which nothing can prevent from continuing and increasing will alter the existing conditions of agricultural property in England. Our agriculturists must adapt themselves to the change, freely accepting the good it brings, and skillfully using the advantages which the greater proximity to the market most proximately affords."

Planting White Beans

I think this staple the easiest and most simple crop to grow of anything that I have ever undertaken. At the same time it must stand at the head of the list as a solid, substantial health and strength giving stand-by for a hungry man. Although it is better adapted to a more northern latitude, I have had uniformly good success except when a wet spell comes on, as they are very sensitive to wet weather. My practice in growing them on a small scale is to plant in June, and if the ground is free from soil weed seeds, one plants in the following manner. I sometimes have the drills eighteen or twenty inches apart, and give one good raking with a harrow, and then with a light shovell and fan them out in the wind. There may be better methods of sowing, but the above mode, if made and primitive, is effectual. I much prefer seed that is brought from Canada, which can often be found in groceries, and which has been known to be sown because much used by sailors, while the famous Boston baked beans are as much relied by Yankees as our kraut is by a German.—Rural World.

Benefit of Hoeing

One of the greatest benefits from sowing our garden seeds is the opportunity it affords us of hoeing frequently and thoroughly between the rows. Too many persons who use the hoe supposed that the chief benefit derived from it is to kill the weeds. That certainly is an important work, and which is greatly neglected. Weeds are not only in the way of outgrowing plants, but they retain most abundantly the rob them of much of the nutriment which they so much need. Hoeing, then, is an essential service in respect to destroying the weeds. There are other advantages, however, which are quite commonly overlooked. Let us see.

1. The loosening of the soil in the operation of hoeing is beneficial to the plants as much as the destruction of the weeds or more so.

2. Moisture abounds in the atmosphere during the hottest months, and it is absorbed and retained most abundantly by a soil which is in the most friable state. Prof. Schuber found that 1,000 grains of stiff clay absorbed in twenty-four hours only thirty-six grains of moisture, while the same quantity of friable soil absorbed forty-five grains, and the fine magnesia twenty-six grains.

3. Then, again, pulverizing the soil enables it better to retain the moisture absorbed. The soil, in order to be healthy and active, must breathe. A light, porous soil admits the air and this is fed and greatly invigorated by the atmosphere.

4. The sun's rays heat a hard soil much quicker than a loose one, and the hotter the sun is, so much greater is the evaporation of the soil. So that the hard soil is deprived of its moisture much sooner than one of a loose texture.

5. The roots of plants can find their way through a moist, loose soil, and reach of food, much better than they can through hard soil.

6. A soil that is kept loose near the surface by the action of the hoe, will receive and hold the rain water that falls, while a hard soil will allow it to run off into the valleys and streams as it falls.

An English gardener, Mr. Barnes of Devonshire, in getting an opinion of the importance of hoeing, said he "did not agree with those who say that one good weeding is worth two plantings; I say, never weed any crop in which a hoe can be got between the plants, not so much for the sake of destroying weeds and vermin, which must necessarily be the case if the hoeing be done well, as for increasing the porosity of the soil, to allow the water and air to penetrate freely through it." He adds "I am well convinced, by long and close practice, that sometimes there is more benefit derived by crops from keeping them well hoed, than there is from the manure applied. Weeds or no weeds, I still keep stirring the soil, well knowing from practice, the very beneficial effect it has."

It is now proposed to state the manner in which most of our successful feeders fatten their sheep for market. If they are spring lambs, put them into their pens about the 1st of November, and commence with a light feed of corn and oats, having a light cotton-seed meal mixed. This feed is given the first thing in the morning; then a feed of good early cut hay, or straw, followed by a feed of coarse hay, or straw, at or near noon. The sheep should be left to themselves after their last feed. There is nothing that will so much check a sheep in laying on fat as to behold a man who will go out quietly to the barn, clean the rack of hay or straw giving the sheep a good feed, and then feed with grain as in the morning, with a good feed of prime early cut hay, or straw, at or near noon. The sheep should be left to themselves after their last feed.
