"Why, Henry—" she began.
"Don't try to excuse yourself," he interrupted. "Look at this room! I was going to bring home a friend with me but I refrained for fear that the house would be in just the condition that I find it."

"If you had sent word, Henry—"
"Sent word, Maria! Why should I have to send word? Why should any one who claims to be a housekeeper have to be notified that she can scurry around and make things look respectable? And that gown, Maria! It is outrageous to be dressed in that fashion at this time of day."

"I could have changed it—"
"Oh, of course. You could have done lots of things, but you didn't. You should be ready to entertain your husband's friends at any time. I suppose the dinner is cold, too."

THE UNGRATEFUL PATIENT.

Pretty Girl Disappointed

"Our lives are full of disappointments," remarked my friend, the surgeon, who is famous for his ability to joke with patients of any nationality in their own language and make them forget their misery for the time. "Early last summer a charming young lady was brought to my office from a western state in a pitiable condition. She western state in a pitiable condition. She had dislocated her ankle some months beore, and from unskilled treatment it had been put in such a shape that I thought at irist that amputation might be necessary. She danced around the room to prove that herankle was perfectly strong again, and gave me this handsome silver inkstand for a remembrance. As I accompanied them to the stoop she paused on the upper step and took my hand again. 'Doctor,' said she, 'beyond the check which papa will send you and the eternal gratitude of mamma and myself I feel that you deserve some further reward.' Leaning toward me she went on impressively. 'You deserve a reward that most men would risk their necks to gain! You deserve a kiss! She paused for a second, and then said. 'Mamma, kiss him,' and before I could get the pucker out of my lips she was down in the street send-fing up at me the most tantalizing laugh I have ever heard. Horses, Carriages, Hacks, Etc., by Auction.

Attention is called to the gigantic unreserved auction sale of horses, hacks, coupes, Rockaways, Victorias, sleighs, harness, iron safe, etc., etc., that takes place at No. 61 York-street on Monday, May 1, at 11 o'clock. Mr. Charles M. Henderson will conduct the sale.

Assersment system.

It was sitting in a hotel in Birmingham, a short time ago, doing a few lines of writing, when an old German came in, and fluiding me alone was inclined to be quite friendly. He sat down and began to write in a very laborious manner, and finally stopped and began scratching his head as if he had run against a snag. And that was the case, for he had run up against a bit of English orthography which was too much for him. After struggling by himself for a few minutes he looked up at me in a despairing way and said: "Meester, pelongs an 'e' behindt before'?"—W, A. Harrold.

The Experience of a Girl Who Tried It—

Walking the streets of New York is not a pleasant way for a girl to spend the inject.

At 9 o'clock last Thesday evening, dressed as a newly-arrived country girl, I tarted the greatest city in America.

It is not unusual to read of some friendless, penniless girl who has wandered around all night waiting for the dawn to bring its opportunity for seeking employment or for finding somerfuge. Have yon, were thought what that story meant flar, what utter desolation the poor girl must have endured?

Let me assure you that, seated in your comfortable homes, with light and warmth and friends about you, you cannot fathom, the bitterness of such an experience. I found the word to the night and sustain no harm. She will be "shadowed" by all sorts of men, but it she goes quictly on and if the men do not he height and sustain no harm. She will be "shadowed" by all sorts of men, but it she goes quictly on and if the men do not happen to be too drunk, she will not even be spoken to.

I found—what may surprise the Park-hurstan camp—that a policeman's badge is a veritable star of hope to a respectable stranger.

It is the universal, but erroneous, idea that royalty is on the free list of the European theatres and that a royal personage has but to signify his or her intention to patronize a certain place of amusement to cause quite a flutter of excitement in the bosoms of the managers and make them feel that they are "more than repaid," and all that sort of thing. So far from this being the case, it is a fact that the crowned heads and their families pay an exorbitant price for their amusement, and are consequently regarded by managers as angels of the sort whose visits are by no means few	Meyer, stand up and tell us what nothing is. The latter, as its name implies, is that set apart for kings, queens and their blood relatives. It is surmounted by the crown of England, and is, of course, fitted in more sumptuous style than those that surround it. With one or two exceptions the box is not reserved exclusively for royalty, and it can be hired by anyone who cares to pay the price—about twice as much as is charged for the private boxes. The exceptions are the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, the Italian Opera and the Haymarket Theatre. In the case of the Haymarket the entrance to the royal seal is in a street back of the theatre, Suffolk street, and it is reached only by passing through a private house. This house is leased conditionally upon the right of way being granted to princes of the blood.	Even Worse. A recent traveler in Malta says that the people have a peculiarly apt and ready wit. He tells of an English officer, who, failing to make a poor Maltese understand an order delivered in the language of Cockaigne, called the poor man "a fool." Understanding this much, the man, who had traveled about a good deal, though he did not understand English, replied by asking: "Do you speak Maltese?" "No." "Do you speak Arabic?" "No." "Yo you speak Italian?" "No." "Then, if I be one fool, you be four fools!"—Arzonant. New Books at the Public Library.
