WALTER SCOTT, The "Keen Kutter"

THE MOUNT HANLEY TRAGEDY A Story of Joy and Sorrow. The Floral Tributes

Brooklyn has never been more joyful or the Hall held a happier crowd than it did on Tuesday evening, May 20th, when it welcomed its returned soldiers. There were seven of them—Reg. Neily, Freeman Beals, Vaughn Beals, Wilbur Neily, Mack and George Elliott and Wilfred Chesley, all safe home again after going through the dangers of this awful War where so many have fallen.

How near to death they had often been and now all over they were back again and fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, friends and visitors were there to rejoice with them. With music and speeches and ice cream in abundance, it was an evening never to be forgotten. How close sometimes along the journey of gladness are followed by days of tragedy that take all the joy out of living.

The next evening, two of that happy company, George and Mack Elliott left their home for an hour's fishing on the Lake that has been a playground for them all their lives. Earlier in the day Dr. Herman and Spurgeon Vidito of Nictaux Falls had engaged the boat by phone for the evening. When they arrived the boys came ashore with the intention of going home, but were seen a little later about 300 yards away in another boat. Some time after this Dr. Herman hearing a call looked across the Lake and saw the boys struggling in the water. With all haste they hurried to rescue them but were too late for they sank for the last time before they could reach them.

In the gathering gloom of the evening it was impossible to see any depth into the water and the only thing they could do was to return to the home and inform the stricken family. A veil must be drawn across that scene too sacred to describe. When the news spread through the community, men and women were stunned, they could not believe that such an awful tragedy could have taken place in their quiet little village. Soon relatives and other friends were hurrying from all quarters to offer sympathy and help the long hours of the short night pass and early in the morning men arrived from Port George to assist in the work of finding the precious bodies.

Fortunately, as near as could be done, the place where they sank had been marked and a little after 8 a. m. they were found and brought ashore. Those who saw the bodies removed from the Lake will never forget the sad scene. Many were life-long friends and companions. It was a mournful procession that wended its way back to the sorrowful home.

Splendid in physique, clear in intellect and big of heart, these should have traveled far along the way of a successful and prosperous life and fighting with the 8th Siege Battery only arrived home the Friday before.

George after spending a three years at Acadia, went to the Normal College at Truro for a year, then taught Mechanic Science in Annapolis Co. for a year and another year in Saskatoon. He enlisted in the Flying Corps but had not gone overseas when the Armistice was signed. It was his intention to go to Guelph this fall and take advanced studies in his profession.

Mack's plan was to stay at home with his father on the farm. He had travelled far and seen much, but there was no place like home. Replying to one of the speakers at the Reception on Tuesday evening he had said, pointing to his mother in the audience, "There is my little sweetheart to whom I have come home."

They were two fine young men, members of the Mt. Hanley Baptist Church having united with that church under the ministry of Rev. S. S. Poole.

Possessed of a very happy and friendly manner, they had hosts of friends, wherever they were known, who sincerely mourn their tragic death. Beside their parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Elliott, they are survived by a sister, Minnie and a brother, Roscoe.

The funeral took place on Friday and was the largest ever seen in the community. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Hutchins, Rev. S. J. Boyce, and Rev. W. R. Turner who had been among the speakers at the reception previously referred to. Mr. Gordon Crowe sang very sympathetically "The Beautiful Land on High." They were buried side by side in one grave at Port George being carried to their last resting place by 8 returned comrades.

The floral offerings were beautiful and numerous, more than covering both caskets. They were as follows—
