

Siebenter Auftritt.

1. You need not excuse me for doing my duty. 2. It is incomprehensible to me how I was able to escape. 3. The house and garden were surrounded. 4. Have they searched the house? 5. My duty, miss, requires me to ask you another question. 6. Have I the right to invite anyone to tea? 7. Will you have the kindness to serve me as a guide? 8. I am sorry that I cannot offer you a cup of tea. 9. May I ask the gentlemen to give me their names?

Achter Auftritt.

1. Don't remain standing there. 2. You have probably heard that I have instituted a house search. 3. This is Mr. Stevenson's servant, where is yours? 4. Do you know English? I considered it superfluous to learn it. 5. Don't meddle with the business of the police. 6. Examine the date of the postmark on your letter. 7. The letter itself begins: London, March the 13th, 1912. 8. This gentleman is doubtless all right. 9. If I catch you telling an untruth, what must I think of you? 10. You were alluding to me a moment ago. 11. What a fine liar you are? 12. If it is no trouble, ask for him in the city of London. 13. I promise to build no more barricades, unless it be to protect you.

nach mittag - afternoon
vor mittag forenoon.