TRANSLATED FROM THE ORIGINAL ITALIAN OF THE ABBE LAZZARO SPALLANZANI,

Profeffor-Royal of Natural Hiftory in the University of Pavia, and Superintendant of the Imperial Muleum in that City; Fellow of the Royal Society of London; and Member of the Academies of Pruffia, Stock-holm, Gottingen, Turin, Padua, &c. &c.*

ADVERTISEMENT BY THE TRANSLATOR.

THE name and established reputation of the Abbé Spallanzani must certainly be a L fufficient recommendation of any work he gives to the public, especially of one like the prefent, on which he appears to have beftowed a more than ordinary degree of labour and attention. The variety of objects, highly interesting to the naturalist and the philosopher, on which it treats, may be feen in the following introduction, which contains, in part, a fummary of the work.

In the translation, fidelity and accuracy have been principally fludied. The reader, it it prefumed, has before him a faithful transcript of the original (if the expression may be allowed) in his own language. Where the meaning admitted of no doubt, the translator thought himfelf at liberty to depart from the phrafeology of his author, to give his idea with greater perfpicuity : a licence which the different idioms of language will frequently render neceffary : but where any fhadow of ambiguity appeared (and in every work, especially works of science, such ambiguities of expression will occasionally be found) he has (crupuloufly adhered to the literal expression of his text, that the reader may be enabled to form his judgment in the fame manner as from the original.

* The parts leaft interefting to the general reader are omitted.
