

has been secured; and in addition to some conveniences and other improvements on the place, the grounds around are about to be enclosed by neat and substantial fences, and what is most satisfactory, is the fact that no debt has been incurred by these improvements, the necessary funds having been provided by the indefatigable energy of our worthy ladies; and which, with the clergyman's stipend, the subscriptions to the D. C. S.—which are in excess of last year—a small present, on account of the voluntary and much appreciated services of the Organist at St. Eleanor's, a library for the Sunday school at Summerside, which was unfortunately lost in the Steamer Greyhound, considerably exceed the amount of £300. There is still a debt of £150 at the new church at Summerside, which he hopes will soon be paid. The Rector adds that he himself went to his people throughout the parish to collect for the D. C. S.—the more effectually to plead the claims of the Society, and to afford as much information as possible on the missionary work of our Church in other places. There have been four Sunday schools in operation during the year, and the attendance of teachers and children—although there is room for improvement—has been tolerably good, regard being paid to the circumstances incident to a country parish.

The Missionary reports that having suffered much from ill health during the greater part of the year past, he has not been in a position to administer the affairs of his parish in such a manner as to render the past year one of marked progress. He is thankful, however, to record that he has been enabled to keep all his Sabbath appoint-
