Selling HUDSON SIXES By Wireless

Seattle has discovered a new stunt in the motor car business. The steamship Minnesota—that hugest of all American freighters—was many hundreds of miles out on the Pacific, when her commander, Captain Thomas W. Garlick, and his friend, Mr. W. C. Ruckman of Seattle, concluded that life for them was not worth living unless they each could number among their portable property a HUDSON SIX.

Whereupon, the captain invoked the aid of the wireless and across the leagues of blue Pacific they snapped a message to the effect that two Six-40's should be waiting for them at the Smith's Cove Dock when the big steamship arrived in Seattle.

And here we have the picture of the big boat—likewise Captain Garlick and daughter in a Six-40 Phaeton—likewise Mr. W. C. Ruckman in a Six-40 Roadster. Mr. Ruckman has owned thirteen motor cars, and he declares his fourteenth car, the Six-40 Roadster, gives him more pride and pleasure than even cars that cost him $5,000.
